MOTHER OF TWO CHILDREN SWIMS CHANNEL

MRS. C. CORSON,
27, OF NEW YORK,
LATEST VICTOR

HER TIME ACROSS CHANNEL
WAS 15 HOURS, 38
MINUTES
SAYS SHE DID IT "TO MAKE SOME MONEY FOR MY KIDS"

By ROBERT DOWSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Dover, England, Aug. 28.—A Danish-American mother of two children today swam the English Channel "to make some money for my kids" and walked ashore at Dover to collapse in the arms of her trainer.

She was Mrs. Clemington Corson, 27, of New York, who is known professionally as Mile. Gade. Her time across the channel was 15 hours and 38 minutes, one hour and seven minutes slower than Gertrude Ederle, but faster by nearly an hour than the time of any of the five men who have swam the channel.

In the name of his wife, Clemington Corson today claimed for her the distinction of making the first "open sea" swim across the channel. Corson rowed a boat beside his wife the whole way and there was no tug although a motor boat accompanied the swimmer.

"Mrs. Corson holds the record for an open sea swim," Corson told the United Press.

"She was not protected by a tug and had only a motor boat. Her conditions were exactly the same as those under which Burgess, Webb and Sullivan swam, that is a real open sea swim. She could not do it again for $1,000,000."

GERTRUDE EDERLE
CONGRATULATES HER

New York, Aug. 28.—"I am very happy that the English Channel has again been conquered by a woman and I have sent my heartiest congratulations to Mrs. Corson. I am however, very proud to have been the first woman to cross and to hold the record made," Gertrude Ederle said today.

Dover, England, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Mrs. Clemington Corson (Mile. Gade) of New York, Danish-American swimmer, today conquered the English Channel in a successful and speedy swim from Cape Gris Nez.

In so doing she defeated two men swimmers, the powerful Egyptian, Helmy, who gave up when seized by cramps at 2:30 A. M. today, and the English swimmer, Frank Perke, who quit a mile and a half off shore at 1:40 P. M.

It was officially announced that Mrs. Corson made the swim in 15 hours and 38 minutes.

Her official starting time was given as 11:32 P. M. yesterday and her official finishing time as 3:10 P. M. today.

The plucky 27-year-old woman—mother of two children—is the second woman to swim the channel.

Entering the water at Cape Gris Nez at 11:25 P. M. yesterday, she reached the English shore at Dover Beach about 3 P. M. today.

Although it had seemed, as she neared the beach, that she might break Gertrude Ederle's record of 14 hours and 31 minutes, her time was more than fifteen hours.

She did, however, beat the best record established by a man, that of Sebastian Tirabochi, the Argentine swimmer, who crossed the channel in 16 hours and 23 minutes.

In addition to beating the time of Tirabochi by nearly an hour, Mrs. Corson's time beats that of all five men who have accomplished the channel swim.

A big crowd on the beach cheered enthusiastically as Mrs. Corson completed the swim.

"I was determined to make it or go down," she said. "I've got to make some money for my kids."

Mrs. Corson virtually collapsed after landing. She was taken to a hot bath, and the grease scraped off her body.

By 4 P. M. she was asleep.

24 PRISONERS
ESCAPE FROM MICHIGAN JAIL

Ionla, Mich., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Posses today searched for 24 prisoners who escaped from the Ionla state reformatory here early today by overpowering the entire night force, locking them in cells and then fleeing in two prison automobiles. Several of the escaped prisoners were garbed in the uniforms of the night force.

Preceding the delivery two prison guards overheard a disturbance in D ward of the main building of the institution and entered to be held up by leaders of the rioting prisoners.

Taking the two guards in custody the prisoners drove them to the quarantine ward where they found three other guards, locked them in the ward and then changed to prison guard attire.

Following the escape all other prisoners in the reformatory broke loose in a wild bedlam of noise, demanding their release. They were quieted by Deputy Warden Edward Height, who discharged a shot gun loaded with bird shot down a tier corridor.

Albert Lea, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—A house which was wrecked by explosion and fire has been closed to the curious and Mrs. Emma Anderson, the owner, is in the Freeborn county jail charged with arson.

State fire marshals who are conducting a further investigation of the mysterious blast were told by Mrs. Anderson that she did not set fire to the building and that someone who wished to harm her had exploded a bomb. Mrs. Anderson admitted carrying $3,750 in insurance on the house and contents.

Neighbors said that flames burst simultaneously from all windows on one side of the house and that Mrs. Anderson ran out, screaming hysterically that someone had attempted to take her life.

Deputy fire marshals said that flames made little headway, but that nevertheless, appeared to have broken out in several spots at once.

Fire Chief Alex Larson ordered the house closed and barred it to all visitors.

Commander John Rodgers, Flight Hero of the Pacific, Meets Death In The Delaware River

NAVY FLIER CAUGHT IN THE PLANE WRECKAGE

LAST THOUGHT FOR HIS MACHIN-IST'S MATE, SAMUEL
SCHULTZ

RODGERS WAS RELIEVED ONLY A FEW WEEKS AGO FROM DESK DUTY

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Commander John Rodgers who escaped death after being lost for nine days on the Pacific during the California-Hawaii flight last year, was killed when his plane crashed into the Delaware river near here.

The navy's air hero was caught in the wreckage of his plane and it was almost an hour before he was set free. He died soon afterward in the navy yard hospital.

Samuel Schultz, machinist's mate, with Schultz, was seriously injured and physicians at the hospital said he might die.

The cause of the accident had not been determined definitely today. Watchers saw the plane side-slip as it neared the Philadelphia airplane factory landing field and fall 25 feet into the Delaware river.

Rodgers' leg was entangled in the wreckage of the controls and only his head remained above water. Rodgers thought first of Schultz as he personally directed a squad of 20 men engaged in rescue work.

"Get Schultz," he called out as a landing crew approached the scene of the wreck.

Commander Rodgers was relieved only a few weeks ago from desk duty as chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics which he had found irksome, to take charge of several projected test flights using the newly developed PN-10 planes. It was to inspect these planes, now being constructed at the Philadelphia plant that Rodgers set out from here yesterday on his fatal flight.

In an effort to determine how Commander John Rodgers met his death, a board of inquiry met at the navy yard here today. Their report was forwarded to Rear Admiral Magruder, commandant of the navy yard, but was not made public. Broken ribs puncturing the lungs was understood to be the cause of death.

The official board of investigation into the tragedy will convene Monday, it was understood. It will hear witnesses of the crash and endeavor to ascertain the cause.

CONTINUE PLANS FOR PANAMA FLIGHT

Washington, Aug. 28.—The navy air forces, hard hit by the death in Philadelphia yesterday of Commander John R. Rodgers, will carry on with plans for a Panama flight and other airplane tests which Rodgers was to have directed, it was understood. The death of Rodgers when his airplane fell into the shallow Delaware river at the naval aircraft factory was regarded by experts here as a severe blow to naval aviation development. Rodgers was one of the earliest naval aviators and it was on him that the navy relied for such hazardous expeditions as the Hawaiian attempt, which he commanded last year, and the proposed air journey to San Diego via the Canal Zone.

TWICE THROWN INTO AIR BY
INFURIATED BULL

Canby, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Twice thrown high in the air by an infuriated bull, William Kraft, president of the Canby Livestock association and prominent Hamner township farmer, is recovering from injuries he suffered, including a fractured collarbone.

Kraft attempted to persuade the animal with a club and it charged at him and threw him into the air. He came down on the bull's neck and fell to the ground, but the animal again charged and tossed him 20 feet into the air.

Despite his injury, Kraft managed to crawl to a fence and climb over it to safety.

FREIGHT TRAIN

Webster, S. D., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Derailment of a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight train three miles east of here killed Joseph Connery, of Montevideo, Minn., Friday night. The wreck delayed the Olympian, crack Milwaukee flyer, for several hours.

GROSS EARNINGS OF RAILWAYS
OF MINNESOTA

CLAIMED TO BE LESS FOR FIRST
HALF OF YEAR
1926

NOT EQUALING THE PERIOD OF THE YEAR
1925

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The gross earnings of Minnesota railroads for the first half of 1926 were $1,389,832.09 less than for the same period last year.

Total for all the railroads operating in the state were compiled today in the office of the state tax commission following receipt of the statements of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, and the Chicago & Northwestern railroads, which were the last to report.

The total decrease in earnings for the first six months of this year is more than accounted for by the loss in earnings of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern alone.

This ore-carrying road reported gross earnings this year of $5,438,415 as against $6,843,798 for the first half of 1925, a decrease of $1,405,293. The tax for the first half of this year is $271,920 as compared with $342,185 for last year, a decrease of $70,265.

This falling off in earnings of this road is explained by the fact that the ore shipping season opened this year considerably later than usual. The Chicago & Northwestern reported gross earnings for the first six months of 1926 of $2,352,613, a loss of $5,408, as compared with the same period of last year.

The total earnings reported by all the roads for the first six months of this year amounted to $65,440,782.84 as against $66,830,704.93, while the 5 per cent tax this year amounts to $3,272,043.65, a decrease from last year of $69,491.58.

BROTHER TOO LATE

ALBERTO GUGLIELMO AT SEA
WHEN VALENTINO IS BURIED

New York, Aug. 28.—(UP)—When Rudolph Valentino is buried Monday with all the solemn dignity of one of the Catholic church's most impressive services, his brother, Alberto Guglielmo, will be far out to sea, too late in his race to New York to attend the funeral.

The health department, however, granted permission today for the body to be kept 48 hours after the funeral, so Alberto, when he arrives from Paris on the Homeric Wednesday will be able to see his brother before he is laid away.

Arrangements for the funeral were completed today. Only a few friends of the actor will accompany the body from the funeral parlor to St. Malachi's, the "actors' church."

There 500 carefully selected persons will be present on cards of invitation. A double platoon of police, shoulder to shoulder, will keep the crowd from rushing the church doors.

A solemn high requiem mass will be sung and the body will be placed in a vault, where it probably will remain until it is taken to Hollywood for burial, under present plans.

PONTIFF CABLES TO THE EPIS-COPATE OF OLD

NOT KNOWN WHEN PETITION
FOR REFORM OF RELIGIOUS
LAWS TO BE PRESENTED

By A. W. FOLGER

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Mexico City, Aug. 28.—Gratification of Pope Pius at the firm stand of the Mexican clergy, as expressed by the pontiff in a cablegram to the Mexican Episcopate in which he sent the papal benediction, has strengthened the stand of the church against the new religious laws, observers here believe.

When and in what form the expected petition of the Episcopate, asking reform of the laws, will be presented to congress is not known but it is generally believed that the struggle will be long drawn out.

A further effort to seek a solution will be made at the last meeting of the Episcopate today, at which the body terminates its present session. Meanwhile bulletins of the Catholic League of Religious Defense, exhorting the faithful to continue the economic boycott, still flood the city.

The bulletins point out that a great decline has occurred in trade and in attendance at movies and declare that the city government, to aid in the fight on the boycott, has permitted the motion picture houses to abstain from paying taxes, thereby losing $20,000 in the first week of the boycott alone.

Mexican Scottish rite Masons have telegraphed President Coolidge congratulating him for his refusal to participate in the religious conflict.

The message signed by Luis Manuel Rojas, grand commander, reads: "We send you our hearty applause for your firm stand. We present our sincere recognition for your refusal to enter into a conflict despite the pressure brought to bear on your government. For if you had given any encouragement on this question your action perhaps would have unchained a tremendous war in our country."

"It is impossible for one on the outside to have a real understanding on this conflict and to realize that the only way to maintain public order in Mexico is to enforce the law and to compel the Roman clergy to submit unconditionally to the will of the people as expressed many years ago in the constitution."

Mann, Sparta, senior chief de train; Maurice Johnson, Eau Claire, junior chief de train; George E. Lee, Superior, chemist national, and Robert Lean, Elkhorn, commissaire intendant.

A grand promenade of the members will be held on the streets here tonight, followed by a "big wreck" initiation ceremonies for fifty candidates.

LOUIS SCHALLER

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The Minnesota state association of the Order of De Molay will be headed during the next year by Louis Schaller, of St. Paul.

Election of officers took place Friday at the closing session of the fourth annual convocation. Dudley McClure, of Two Harbors, was named vice president; Russell Wallin, of Willmar, secretary, and William Pryor, of Duluth, and E. E. Pike, of Minneapolis, directors.

Green Lake, near Willmar, will be the scene of the next year's convocation.

BANK BANDITS STEAL
$8,000 IN BILLS AT
BRODHEAD, WIS.

Beloit, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Police of this section were still searching this morning for the bank robbers who late yesterday afternoon held up the Bank of Brodhead, at Brodhead, and escaped with $8,000 in bills.

The three men entered the bank about 10 minutes before closing time—4 o'clock—and forced the four bank employees and six customers to lie down on the floor behind a bank cage.

With two standing guard, the third man leaped over the counter and scooped up all the bills in sight. They escaped in a Hudson sedan which bore a Missouri license plate.

It is the belief of police officials that the trio made their way into Illinois.

The robbers on entering the little town, 20 miles west of Beloit, sprinkled tacks over all the streets leading to highways out of the town with the exception of the one they took in their flight after the bold daylight robbery.

RETURN VISIT OF HOT WEATHER TO NORTHWEST

RECORD TEMPERATURES OF YES-TERDAY, HOWEVER, NOT APPROACHED

TROUGH OF HEAT WAVE EX-TENDED NORTH TO WINNIPEG

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The return visit of warm weather to the northwest was not ended today, although reports indicated that the record temperatures of yesterday would not be approached.

The trough of the heat wave extended as far north as Winnipeg, although The Pas, in the same province, was 22 degrees cooler. Omaha reported a temperature of 102 degrees while at Huron, S. D., an even 100 was recorded.

In St. Paul, the thermometer touched 99 degrees. North Dakota, apparently, had obtained relief.

Although it caused considerable suffering, especially in the large centers of population, the heat wave was a boon to farmers. It hastened the maturity of the corn crop and saved small grains from sprouting in the shock. Previous rain and dampness had been injurious.

Meanwhile, the heat wave rolled on to other sections of the middle west and the official forecast was for cooler weather today and tomorrow.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—(UP)—In a tiny cottage some twenty stories above the roaring loop, Kaddu Krishnamurti—"the vehicle of the second coming of Christ"—today viewed Chicago.

The slender young Hindu, through whom many believe the great teacher speaks, is here to attend the International Theosophists' Congress.

Krishnamurti, accompanied by Dr. Annie Besant, and numerous other leaders of Theosophists' Association, arrived in Chicago this morning well before the downtown district was astir. He was immediately whisked to his hotel and taken to the cottage on the roof where he will remain in seclusion except for a few appearances before the theosophist meeting.

"Now, I am train weary," the keen-eyed young Hindu said, upon arrival. "I would prefer not to talk. Later today you may see me."

Krishnamurti will make his first appearance before the theosophists tonight at a reception. More than 30,000 persons are expected to be in attendance during the meetings.

POLITICAL OBSERVERS PREDICT-
ING VICTORY FOR YOUNG
MOODY

Austin, Texas, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Whether a woman or man is to be the next governor of Texas was to be decided by voters today when they cast their ballots for either Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson or her fiery opponent, Dan Moody, attorney general.

Political observers are predicting a victory for Moody. They base their claims on the results of the first primary several weeks ago when Moody led his four opponents, including Gov. Ferguson, by a wide margin. A run-off primary between Moody and the woman executive runner-up in the contest was necessary as the attorney general lacked a majority over his opponents.

Gov. Ferguson and her husband, "Jim" Ferguson, have charged the Ku Klux Klan with backing Moody. The latter has had as his campaign slogan: "Rid the state of Fergusonism."

The attorney general and the woman executive have been bitter political enemies and the campaign has been one of the most heated Texas has ever seen.

Moody supporters charge the woman governor with "welching" because of her refusal to withdraw from the race after she had stated she would, if Moody led her by one vote in the first primary.

Chippewa Falls, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—A "white rock" which Alvin L. Krause, owner of a restaurant here, found in the gizzard of a chicken was discovered today to be an unmounted diamond.

As a result, Krause intends to continue his practice of cleaning all chickens purchased for his restaurant.

Krause found the diamond last night and laid it aside, believing it of no value. Later a jeweler saw it, examined it and told the restaurant man that it was of perfect quality, one-half carat, worth $250.

INFURIATED BULL

Canby, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Twice thrown high in the air by an infuriated bull, William Kraft, president of the Canby Livestock association and prominent Hammer township farmer, is recovering from injuries he suffered, including a fractured collarbone.

Kraft attempted to persuade the animal with a club and it charged at him and threw him into the air. He came down on the bull's neck and fell to the ground, but the animal again charged and tossed him 20 feet into the air.

Despite his injury, Kraft managed to crawl to a fence and climb over it to safety.

GROSS EARNINGS
OF RAILWAYS
OF MINNESOTA

CLAIMED TO BE LESS FOR FIRST
HALF OF YEAR
1926

NOT EQUALLING THE PERIOD OF THE YEAR
1925

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The gross earnings of Minnesota railroads for the first half of 1926 were $1,389,832.09 less than for the same period last year.

Total for all the railroads operating in the state were compiled today in the office of the state tax commission following receipt of the statements of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, and the Chicago & Northwestern railroads, which were the last to report.

The total decrease in earnings for the first six months of this year is more than accounted for by the loss in earnings of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern alone.

This ore-carrying road reported gross earnings this year of $5,438,415 as against $6,843,708 for the first half of 1925, a decrease of $1,405,293. The tax for the first half of this year is $271,920 as compared with $342,185 for last year, a decrease of $70,265.

This falling off in earnings of this road is explained by the fact that the ore shipping season opened this year considerably later than usual. The Chicago & Northwestern reported gross earnings for the first six months of 1926 of $2,352,613, a loss of $5,408, as compared with the same period of last year.

The total earnings reported by all the roads for the first six months of this year amounted to $65,440,782.84 as against $66,820,704.93, while the 5 per cent tax this year amounts to $3,272,043.65, a decrease from last year of $69,491.58.

ALBERTO GUGLIELMO AT SEA
WHEN VALENTINO IS BURIED

New York, Aug. 28.—(UP)—When Rudolph Valentino is buried Monday with all the solemn dignity of one of the Catholic church's most impressive services, his brother, Alberto Guglielmo, will be far out to sea, too late in his race to New York to attend the funeral.

The health department, however, granted permission today for the body to be kept 45 hours after the funeral, so Alberto, when he arrives from Paris on the Homeric Wednesday will be able to see his brother before he is laid away.

Arrangements for the funeral were completed today. Only a few friends of the actor will accompany the body from the funeral parlor to St. Malachi's, the "actors' church."

There 500 carefully selected persons will be present on cards of invitation. A double platoon of police, shoulder to shoulder, will keep the crowd from rushing the church doors.

A solemn high requiem mass will be sung and the body will be placed in a vault, where it probably will remain until it is taken to Hollywood for burial, under present plans.

NOT KNOWN WHEN PETITION
FOR REFORM OF RELIGIOUS
LAWS TO BE PRESENTED

By A. W. FOLGER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, Aug. 28.—Gratification of Pope Pius at the firm stand of the Mexican clergy, as expressed by the pontiff in a cablegram to the Mexican Episcopate in which he sent the papal benediction, has strengthened the stand of the church against the new religious laws, observers here believe.

When and in what form the expected petition of the Episcopate, asking reform of the laws, will be presented to congress is not known but it is generally believed that the struggle will be long drawn out.

A further effort to seek a solution will be made at the last meeting of the Episcopate today, at which the body terminates its present session. Meanwhile bulletins of the Catholic League of Religious Defense, exhorting the faithful to continue the economic boycott, still flood the city.

The bulletins point out that a great decline has occurred in trade and in attendance at movies and declare that the city government, to aid in the fight on the boycott, has permitted the motion picture houses to abstain from paying taxes, thereby losing $20,000 in the first week of the boycott alone.

Mexican Scottish rite Masons have telegraphed President Coolidge congratulating him for his refusal to participate in the religious conflict. The message signed by Luis Manuel Rojas, grand commander, reads:

"We send you our hearty applause for your firm stand. We present our sincere recognition for your refusal to enter into a conflict despite the pressure brought to bear on your government. For if you had given any encouragement on this question your action perhaps would have unchained a tremendous war in our country."

"It is impossible for one on the outside to have a real understanding on this conflict and to realize that the only way to maintain public order in Mexico is to enforce the law and to compel the Roman clergy to submit unconditionally to the will of the people as expressed many years ago in the constitution."

Mann, Sparta, senior chef de train; Maurice Johnson, Eau Claire, junior chef de train; George E. Lee, Superior, chemist national, and Robert Lean, Elkhorn, commissaire intendente.

Election of officers took place Friday at the closing session of the fourth annual convocation. Dudley McClure, of Two Harbors, was named vice president; Russell Wallin, of Willmar, secretary, and William Pryor, of Duluth, and E. E. Pike, of Minneapolis, directors.

Green Lake, near Willmar, will be the scene of the next year's convocation.

BANK BANDITS STEAL
$8,000 IN BILLS AT
BRODHEAD, WIS.

Beloit, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Police of this section were still searching this morning for the bank robbers who late yesterday afternoon held up the Bank of Brodhead, at Brodhead, and escaped with $8,000 in bills.

The three men entered the bank about 10 minutes before closing time—4 o'clock—and forced the four bank employees and six customers to lie down on the floor behind a bank cage.

With two standing guard, the third man leaped over the counter and scooped up all the bills in sight. They escaped in a Hudson sedan which bore a Missouri license plate.

It is the belief of police officials that the trio made their way into Illinois.

The robbers on entering the little town, 20 miles west of Beloit, sprinkled sacks over all the streets leading to highways out of the town with the exception of the one they took in their flight after the bold daylight robbery.

RECORD TEMPERATURES OF YES-

TROUGH OF HEAT WAVE EX-
TENDED NORTH TO WINNIPEG

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The return visit of warm weather to the northwest was not ended today, although reports indicated that the record temperatures of yesterday would not be approached.

The trough of the heat wave extended as far north as Winnipeg, although The Pas, in the same province, was 22 degrees cooler. Omaha reported a temperature of 102 degrees while at Huron, S. D., an even 100 was recorded.

In St. Paul, the thermometer touched 99 degrees. North Dakota, apparently, had obtained relief.

Although it caused considerable suffering, especially in the large centers of population, the heat wave was a boon to farmers. It hastened the maturity of the corn crop and saved small grains from sprouting in the shock. Previous rain and dampness had been injurious.

Meanwhile, the heat wave rolled on to other sections of the middle west and the official forecast was for cooler weather today and tomorrow.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—(UP)—In a tiny cottage some twenty stories above the roaring loop, Kaddu Krishnamurti—"the vehicle of the second coming of Christ"—today viewed Chicago.

The slender young Hindu, through whom many believe the great teacher speaks, is here to attend the International Theosophists' Congress. Krishnamurti, accompanied by Dr. Anni Besant, and numerous other leaders of Theosophists' Association, arrived in Chicago this morning well before the downtown district was astir. He was immediately whisked to his hotel and taken to the cottage on the roof where he will remain in seclusion except for a few appearances before the theosophist meeting.

"Now, I am train weary," the keen-eyed young Hindu said, upon arrival. "I would prefer not to talk. Later today you may see me."

Krishnamurti will make his first appearance before the theosophists tonight at a reception. More than 30,000 persons are expected to be in attendance during the meetings.

POLITICAL OBSERVERS PREDICT-
ING VICTORY FOR YOUNG
MOODY

Austin, Texas, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Whether a woman or man is to be the next governor of Texas was to be decided by voters today when they cast their ballots for either Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson or her fiery opponent, Dan Moody, attorney general.

Political observers are predicting a victory for Moody. They base their claims on the results of the first primary several weeks ago when Moody led his four opponents, including Gov. Ferguson, by a wide margin. A run-off primary between Moody and the woman executive runner-up in the contest was necessary as the attorney general lacked a majority over his opponents.

Gov. Ferguson and her husband, "Jim" Ferguson, have charged the Ku Klux Klan with backing Moody. The latter has had as his campaign slogan: "Rid the state of Fergusonism."

The attorney general and the woman executive have been bitter political enemies and the campaign has been one of the most heated Texas has ever seen.

Moody supporters charge the woman governor with "welching" because of her refusal to withdraw from the race after she had stated she would, if Moody led her, by one vote in the first primary.

IN GIZZARD OF A CHICKEN

Chippewa Falls, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—A "white rock" which Alvin L. Krause, owner of a restaurant here, found in the gizzard of a chicken was discovered today to be an unmounted diamond.

As a result, Krause intends to continue his practice of cleaning all chickens purchased for his restaurant.

Krause found the diamond last night and laid it aside, believing it of no value. Later a jeweler saw it, examined it and told the restaurateur man that it was of perfect quality, one-half carat, worth $250.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY

Even the weather is freaky today, for threatening rain has been dispelled by the sun breaking through the clouds only to become cloudy again. As yet the weather man has not decided what kind of a day to make it.

But old man weather did do a good job when he decided to make two members of the flower and garden species into freaks.

Tom Taylor, who lives on the Merrifield road today brought into the Dispatch office two cucumbers grown into one another on the same stem. This freak of the cucumber variety weighs three pounds.

And that was not all, for William V. Turcotte noted Brainerd fisherman and heaver for the Rotarian baseball team also exhibited a Siamese sunflower which had two faces and no back to the flower.

The latest freak to be brought in was a white egg laid by a black hen, blind in one eye, and suffering from frost bite.

O'NEILL'S STATEMENT

Gives His Version of Automobile Accident on South 13th Street

John O'Neill, 213 North 9th St., owner of the Chevrolet roadster, one of the cars demolished in the motor car accident with that of Art Ludwig's automobile on 13th street, about six miles south of Brainerd, Friday morning about one o'clock, today gave a completely different version of the story of the accident that what was told by parties who claimed to know the particulars of the case and the story confirmed by Mrs. Ludwig.

Mr. O'Neill said: "Lawrence Stevens and I were returning from Pierz on 13th Street, about six or seven miles from Brainerd. Stevens was driving the car and coming up a hill we noticed the car which we later learned was driven by Art Ludwig coming towards us on the road as a fast rate of speed. The lights on his car were very bright and I asked Stevens if he could pass him all right on the road. He replied to me that he thought he could. We were on the right hand side of the road coming in, with lots of room for him to pass if he stayed on his own side of the road. When we noticed the possibility of an accident, Stevens threw the car out of gear and I pulled the emergency brake. Ludwig crashed side on into our car on our side of the road, throwing the back end of our car into the ditch, we through the windshield and Lawrence out through the back end of the car. Ludwig's car stopped 75 feet south of the rear end of our car. His car was at that time cross ways on the road."

ESTATE SANCTUARY FOR WILD BIRDS

"WYNCHWOOD," LAKE GENEVA, TO BE GIVEN TO STATE OF WISCONSIN

Lake Geneva, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Wynchwood, the 100-acre estate of Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson on the northern shore of Lake Geneva, will be given to the state of Wisconsin on condition that it be used as bird and wild flower reserve, according to an announcement made here.

The estate is a sanctuary for all kinds of birds and more than 120 species have been seen there during a season. The varieties of wild flowers are said to exceed 250 in number.

Wynchwood is valued at $300,000 by Mrs. Hutchinson.

Named by Indians

Both Paraguay and Uruguay are Guarani Indian names. Uruguay means river of waters, referring to the numerous tributaries; possibly from uru-guay, meaning a bird's (uru) tail (guay)—resembling a waterfowl, which spreads like a bird's tail. Paraguay means the golden water, possibly from the water fowl called paraguá.

Paying for Her Cruelty

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

THE dog was smallish. Wriggling happily through a gate left carelessly ajar, it ran after a pair a little way ahead—a stiff-moving woman dressed in new garb, as was the small lad clinging reluctantly to her hand. Heading the pair, the black dog wheeled, put paws upon the child's shoulders, wagging his tail joyously, and making to lick his face. Instantly the woman jerked the child away, and planted a kick midway the dog's length—sending the poor beast into the roadway—and in the path of a passing car.

Ensued tragedy—an agonized yelp, then pitiable moaning whines. At sound of them a tall girl burst through the straggling hedge, ran and knelt by the dying animal, lips quivering but eyes shooting sparks. The other woman had halted—the child was crying bitterly—and said stiffly: "I'm right sorry—but you shouldn't have let your dog attack my baby."

"Attack!" the girl said hoarsely—her eyes adding violently: "You murderer!" But to a man who had sprung from the car, and came toward her, hat in hand, she said clearly: "Chloroform—please?"

Half a minute later, she had her wish—the man luckily was a doctor, with an emergency case. As she held her hand for it he waved it away, saying softly: "Let me! I'm more experienced."

Neither man nor woman stirred till the last painful quiver stilled itself forever. Then the man fetched a robe, and said gently: "Let me take her home for you."

Dr. John Woodley drove homeward with extra caution, considering his daze. He knew the murderer—Mrs. Quintus Moore, half-sister and guardian of the girl he had until half an hour back been wild to marry. She had seemed to him him half fairy, half angel, wholly tender woman—she had charm, poise, breeding, like a comfortable portion. He need not be mercenary—he had a sound patrimony and a growing practice—so Annette's dower had appealed to him mainly as sign manual that she belonged. His wife must be a lady—that was imperative—he meant to go to the very top. Now he was all unsettled. She could not, of course, be held to answer for her sister's cruelty, yet blood told strongly.

Allison house dominated Briardale society. The crowd it held that evening was fine, fit and gay. Annette was at the full bloom of her brunette beauty. Almost, Doctor Woodley's misgivings vanished, as he held her close. Then in a pause for breath, she murmured lightly: "Sorry to disappoint—but I can't show you the new girl—she sent a regret—at the last minute."

"Very, very naughty of her. She must have known I was all set to see her," Doctor Woodley bantered. Annette giggled softly: "Wait till you hear her excuse. Her dog had died suddenly! Ever hear the like?" Of course, we all know it's a tarry-diddle—she really had nothing to wear—so I can't blame her too much. I know her well—we were together a year at Pine Grove—but I haven't called on her since she came to the old Wheat place—inherits it, you know."

"What's her name? I've forgotten—if I ever knew," Woodley asked shamelessly. "Moira Wheat—a real story-book name," Annette flung back. Just then Bruce Baker cut in, crying mendaciously: "Doctor Woodley's wanted on the phone!" Then to Annette: "It's like I tell you—doctors are no good to their wives—you'd a heap better say 'Yes' to me." Woodley was glad of Bruce's jest—in flight there was safety. Sudden madness fell upon him, sending him swiftly to the old Wheat place. A white moon riding high above the summer world showed him the house, dim, deserted. But he had a sense its owner was not far away. There was a white huddled mass low among the gravestones at the back of the blossomy garden—it stirred at his approach, and Moira said calmly: "You came because I was thinking of you so hard."

"What were you thinking?" Woodley demanded. "Something untellable," was the answer. "Then—I'm bound to hear it," from the man. She shook her head undecidedly, then cried quickly: "It really doesn't matter—I was wondering if—if Annet's Betridge will make you happy."

"I can tell you—she will not. She won't have the chance." "Don't lie," sharply, suddenly standing up. "I knew before I came here you two were engaged."

"Then—you know more than I do—or ever will," from Woodley. "Yet it was in my mind—that I don't deny—until this morning."

"She mustn't have to pay for her sister's cruelty—" Moira cried breathlessly. "No! Only for her own," Woodley flung back. "I meant to be fair with her—quite fair—until she mocked your grief, measuring you, no doubt, by herself. It was that sent me here—to you."

"You ought not to have come—I am alone—except for my memories. Tess was—everything to me—friend, guide, guardian—I knew I was safe while she lived—" stopping and biting her lips. "Moira—if only you'll let me, henceforth I will love you and guard you even better than Tess."

Which seems a mighty proper ending for the story.

DAY JAIL SENTENCE

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 28.—(UP)—One hour after he had attempted suicide by drinking poison, Ed Gillette, 55, of Duluth, was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail for disorderly conduct.

Despondency is believed to have caused Gillette's act. He is a former resident of Hibbing and Virginia.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY

Even the weather is freaky today, for threatening rain has been dispelled by the sun breaking through the clouds only to become cloudy again.

As yet the weather man has not decided what kind of a day to make it.

But old man weather did do a good job when he decided to make two members of the flower and garden species into freaks.

Tom Taylor, who lives on the Merrifield road today brought into the Dispatch office two cucumbers grown into one another on the same stem. This freak of the cucumber variety weighs three pounds.

And that was not all, for William V. Turcotte noted Brainerd fisherman and heaver for the Rotarian baseball team also exhibited a Siamese sunflower which had two faces and no back to the flower.

The latest freak to be brought in was a white egg laid by a black hen, blind in one eye, and suffering from frost bite.

O'NEILL'S STATEMENT

Gives His Version of Automobile Accident on South 13th Street

John O'Neill, 213 North 9th St., owner of the Chevrolet roadster, one of the cars demolished in the motor car accident with that of Art Ludwig's automobile on 13th street, about six miles south of Brainerd, Friday morning about one o'clock, today gave a completely different version of the story of the accident that what was told by parties who claimed to know the particulars of the case and the story confirmed by Mrs. Ludwig.

Mr. O'Neill said: "Lawrence Stevens and I were returning from Pierz on 13th Street, about six or seven miles from Brainerd. Stevens was driving the car and coming up a hill we noticed the car which we later learned was driven by Art Ludwig coming towards us on the road as a fast rate of speed. The lights on his car were very bright and I asked Stevens if he could pass him all right on the road. He replied to me that he thought he could. We were on the right hand side of the road coming in, with lots of room for him to pass if he stayed on his own side of the road. When we noticed the possibility of an accident, Stevens threw the car out of gear and I pulled the emergency brake. Ludwig crashed side on into our car on our side of the road, throwing the back end of our car into the ditch, we through the windshield and Lawrence out through the back end of the car. Ludwig's car stopped 75 feet south of the rear end of our car. His car was at that time cross ways on the road."

Wynchwood is valued at $300,000 by Mrs. Hutchinson.

Named by Indians

Both Paraguay and Uruguay are Guarani Indian names. Uruguay means river of waters, referring to the numerous tributaries; possibly from uru-guay, meaning a bird's (uru) tail (guay)—resembling a waterfall, which spreads like a bird's tail. Paraguay means the golden water, possibly from the water fowl called paragua.

Paying for Her
Cruelty

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

THE dog was smallish. Wriggling happily through a gate left carelessly ajar, it ran after a pair a little way ahead—a stiff-moving woman dressed in new garb, as was the small lad clinging reluctantly to her hand.

Heading the pair, the black dog wheeled, put paws upon the child's shoulders, wagging his tail joyously, and making to lick his face. Instantly the woman jerked the child away, and planted a kick midway the dog's length—sending the poor beast into the roadway—and in the path of a passing car.

Ensued tragedy—an agonized yelp, then piteous moaning whines. At sound of them a tall girl burst through the straggling hedge, ran and knelt by the dying animal, lips quivering but eyes shooting sparks. The other woman had halted—the child was crying bitterly—and said stiffly: "I'm right sorry—but you shouldn't have let your dog attack my baby."

"Attack!" the girl said hoarsely—her eyes adding violently: "You murderer!" But to a man who had sprung from the car, and came toward her, hat in hand, she said clearly: "Chloroform—please?"

Half a minute later, she had her wish—the man luckily was a doctor, with an emergency case. As she held her hand for it he waved it away, saying softly: "Let me! I'm more experienced."

Neither man nor woman stirred till the last painful quiver stilled itself forever. Then the man fetched a robe, and said gently: "Let me take her—home for you."

Dr. John Woodley drove homeward with extra caution, considering his daze. He knew the murderer—Mrs. Quintus Moore, half-sister and guardian of the girl he had until half an hour back been wild to marry. She had seemed to him him half fairy, half angel, wholly tender woman—she had charm, poise, breeding, like a comfortable portion. He need not be mercenary—he had a sound patrimony and a growing practice—so Annette's dower had appealed to him mainly as sign manual that she belonged. His wife must be a lady—that was imperative—he meant to go to the very top. Now he was all unsettled. She could not, of course, be held to answer for her sister's cruelty, yet blood told strongly.

Allison house dominated Briarfield society. The crowd it held that evening was fine, fit and gay. Annette was at the full bloom of her brunette beauty. Almost, Doctor Woodley's misgivings vanished, as he held her close. Then in a pause for breath, she murmured liquidly: "Sorry to disappoint—but I can't show you the new girl—she sent a regret—at the last minute."

"Very, very naughty of her. She must have known I was all set to see her," Doctor Woodley banttered. Annette giggled softly: "Wait till you hear her excuse. Her dog had died suddenly! Ever hear the like?" Of course, we all know it's a tarry-diddle—she really had nothing to wear—so I can't blame her too much. I know her well—we were together a year at Pine Grove—but I haven't called on her since she came to the old Wheat place—inherits it, you know."

"What's her name? I've forgotten—if I ever knew," Woodley asked shamelessly. "Moira Wheat—a real story-book name," Annette flung back.

Just then Bruce Baker cut in, crying mendaciously: "Doctor Woodley's wanted on the phone!" Then to Annette: "It's like I tell you—doctors are no good to their wives—you'd a heap better say 'Yes' to me."

Woodley was glad of Bruce's jest—in flight there was safety. Sudden madness fell upon him, sending him swiftly to the old Wheat place. A white moon riding high above the summer world showed him the house, dim, deserted. But he had a sense its owner was not far away. There was a white huddled mass low among the gravestones at the back of the blossomy garden—it stirred at his approach, and Moira said calmly: "You came because I was thinking of you so hard."

"What were you thinking?" Woodley demanded. "Something untellable," was the answer.

"Then—I'm bound to hear it," from the man. She shook her head undecidedly, then cried quickly: "It really doesn't matter—I was wondering if—if Annette Beldridge will make you happy."

"I can tell you—she will not. She won't have the chance."

"Don't lie," sharply, suddenly standing up. "I knew before I came here you two were engaged."

"Then—you know more than I do—or ever will," from Woodley. "Yet it was in my mind—that I don't deny—until this morning—"

"She mustn't have to pay for her sister's cruelty—" Moira cried breathlessly.

"No! Only for her own," Woodley flung back. "I meant to be fair with her—quite fair—until she mocked your grief, measuring you, no doubt, by herself. It was that sent me here—to you."

"You ought not to have come—I am alone—except for my memories. Tess was—everything to me—friend, guide, guardian—I knew I was safe while she lived—" stopping and biting her lips, "Moira—if only you'll let me, henceforth I will love you and guard you even better than Tess."

Which seems a mighty proper ending for the story.

LAST INDEBTEDNESS ON NEW COURT HOUSE

County Auditor C. W. Mahlum Today Issued Warrant For $29,000

COURTHOUSE COST $351,239.98

$30,000 of Old Courthouse Refunding Bonds to be Paid in 1927

County Auditor C. W. Mahlum, today issued a warrant for $29,000 to pay the last indebtedness on the new court house.

The bonds which were issued to pay for the court house were sold to the Minneapolis Trust Company on August 9, 1919 and were payable in installments from 1921 to 1926. The total cost including the site, building, furniture and equipment was $351,239.98.

However, the old court house, built in 1882 is not yet paid for, as for many years nothing was done to retire any of the county indebtedness. In recent years the county board has followed a systematic and comprehensive plan to make the county free from debt.

Thirty thousand dollars of the old court house refunding bonds will be payable July 2, 1927 and provision has been made to take up these bonds when due. The old court house will then be paid for.

Of county indebtedness there will still remain $75,000 in railroad bonds, and the plan which has been followed in recent years and systematically carried out, will, if continued, retire all of these bonds in four years. Then the county will be entirely out of debt.

The sinking fund levy has for the past few years been $35,000 each year, but while paying off these railroad bonds, only $25,000 will be necessary, thus reducing the levy for this purpose $10,000 each year.

Where the Gods Jested With Nature

Strange "Garden of Grotesques" High Up Behind the Mountain Walls of the Black Hills of South Dakota, Least Known Region in United States

The Devil's Tower, or "Mato Teepee," a freak formation resembling a huge tree stump has never been scaled by any man

Out in the Black Hills, that mighty bowl-like citadel of rugged mountains which lift their great bulk of deepest green suddenly and startlingly from the flat sea of the western prairies, there is a myth.

It is easy to understand why the mind of man should be stirred to fantastic imaginings by this striking handiwork of nature. Far from the earlier lines of plains travel, surrounded by the bleak, unearthly wastes of the "Bad Lands," and in former years guarded by bands of hostile and treacherous savages who maintained the most studied silence about them, the Black Hills were for more than a decade during the days of the settlement of the west the embodiment of the mysterious and unknown.

Though many, from afar off, had gazed in fascinated wonder at the blackish mass looming sharply in silent majesty out of the purple horizon, it was long after other regions beyond the Mississippi had been claimed before white men penetrated their secrets.

Nature, too, seems to have conspired to protect the Black Hills from the knowledge of man. Immense walls of mountains offer the slightest possible vantage ground for the intruder.

Fabled City Rumored

There were many stories purporting to be the secrets of the Black Hills current in those times. One of the most popular was that the powerful Indian races, the Sioux, Blackfeet or

Natural Tunnel Through Granite Walls on The Needle's Highway

Crows, had an ancient and rich capital high up behind the solid rocks and heavy forests. This version gained some credence in certain quarters through an incident which aroused the strongest of human incentives, the love of gold, and which was directly responsible for determining the Federal government to solve the "mystery of the Black Hills."

Some Indians came into a frontier trading post, bringing nuggets of the shining metal. Piled with presents and whisky, they said it came from the Black Hills and that it was plentiful there. The story spread rapidly, gaining in force and volume, and exciting all classes of people. The result was Custer's expedition of 1874.

Find Grotesque Garden

The pass, which has since become the splendid highway now winding through the flower grown gorges and over the lush valleys and plateau to the very tops of the bald peaks, was discovered, but there was no fabulous savage city and the gold found at this time was in insignificant quantities.

Its spire-tips dim in the vault of blue skies, its feet resting in the curving green slopes, a "cathedral" of massive, yet delicately beautiful, lines, a pile to dwarf the greatest man-made shrines of the Old World, rises, inaccessible to man, from a huge cup behind the outer mountain ramparts. The illusion is complete even from a short distance, especially when the bright sun glistens on the walls and spires.

Not far away is "The Devil's Tower" which although it is little known, is one of the most extraordinary spectacles of nature. It is shaped like the stump of a tree but it is six hundred feet high and has a diameter at the base of 1,700 feet.

Then there is the "Sphinx Rock," which might have been the pattern for the Pharaohs of Egypt, and "The Needles," slender, perfectly formed, shafts of enormous height. As companion to the latter is the "Needle's

"The Needle's Eye" as Seen from the Highway

Eye." There are many others equally strange.

Tucked away in the southwest portion of South Dakota, almost in the exact center of the continent, the Black Hills region is said to have a wider range of nature's grandeur, more beauty and charm of scenery, more to offer the sportsman and pleasure seeker than any other area of equal size in the world.

Birds Not of Feather

Sir Oswald Mosley, the millionaire socialist, said at a dinner party in New York:

In Great Britain's far-flung empire many strange things happen. A Canadian's wife and a South African's wife once met in a London residential hotel.

"It's hard on us poor married women in South Africa," the latter lady said. "I live in with my husband on an ostrich farm, and it's nothing at all for him to be away two whole days at a time on an ostrich."

"Humph. What of that?" said the Canadian woman. "My husband is often away two whole weeks at a time on a lark."

One Way to Find Out

To return from a shopping trip to find her husband's coat hung over the back of a chair with a note pinned on it saying that he was returning home sick and if he fell unconscious to notify his wife to pay up the insurance was startling enough, but to go upstairs and find him stretched out on the bed was too much for a newly married wife.

She picked up a pin and vigorously prodded the reclining husband, who soon proved that at least he hadn't expired by exclaiming:

"Darn it. I'm not unconscious yet."

Church Musicians Protest

Church organists and singers of Paris have failed to induce the archbishopric of Paris to increase their wages and are now suggesting the possibility of a strike that would deprive the city's churches of the services of professional musicians.

The complaint has been made that while the cost of living has risen to a point five times as high as that of 1914, and the church has increased its charges for burials and marriages in that ratio, the pay of musicians has remained unchanged since the beginning of the war.

During the early part of the evening the temperature went up to 85 degrees which threatened for a while to keep the crowd away but with a cool breeze coming on a crowd quickly gathered.

The next U. C. T. dance will be held Thursday, Sept. 16 at Lum Park. The musical attraction booked for this dance will be Ruth Lewis and Her Melody Maids, or Keith and Orpheum theatre circuit fame. This is said to be the best ladies orchestra in the world.

Where the Gods Jested With Nature

Strange "Garden of Grotesques" High Up Behind the Mountain Walls of the Black Hills of South Dakota,
Least Known Region in United States

The Devil's Tower, or "Mato Teepee," a freak formation resembling a huge tree stump has never been scaled by any man

Out in the Black Hills, that mighty bowl-like citadel of rugged mountains which lift their great bulk of deepest green suddenly and startlingly from the flat sea of the western prairies, there is a myth.

It is easy to understand why the mind of man should be stirred to fantastic imaginings by this striking handiwork of nature. Far from the earlier lines of plains travel, surrounded by the bleak, unearthly wastes of the "Bad Lands," and in former years guarded by bands of hostile and treacherous savages who maintained the most studied silence about them, the Black Hills were for more than a decade during the days of the settlement of the west the embodiment of the mysterious and unknown.

Though many, from afar off, had gazed in fascinated wonder at the blackish mass looming sharply in silent majesty out of the purple horizon, it was long after other regions beyond the Mississippi had been claimed before white men penetrated their secrets.

Nature, too, seems to have conspired to protect the Black Hills from the knowledge of man. Immense walls of mountains offer the slightest possible vantage ground for the intruder.

Fabled City Rumored

There were many stories purporting to be the secrets of the Black Hills current in those times. One of the most popular was that the powerful Indian races, the Sioux, Blackfeet or

Natural Tunnel Through Granite Walls on The Needle's Highway

Crows, had an ancient and rich capital high up behind the solid rocks and heavy forests. This version gained some credence in certain quarters through an incident which aroused the strongest of human incentives, the love of gold, and which was directly responsible for determining the Federal government to solve the "mystery of the Black Hills."

Some Indians came into a frontier trading post, bringing nuggets of the shining metal. Plied with presents and whisky, they said it came from the Black Hills and that it was plentiful there. The story spread rapidly, gaining in force and volume, and exciting all classes of people. The result was Custer's expedition of 1874.

Find Grotesque Garden

The pass, which has since become the splendid highway now winding through the flower grown gorges and over the lush valleys and plateau to the very tops of the bald peaks, was discovered, but there was no fabulous savage city and the gold found at this time was in insignificant quantities.

Its spire-tips dim in the vault of blue skies, its feet resting in the curving green slopes, a "cathedral" of massive, yet delicately beautiful, lines, a pile to dwarf the greatest man-made shrines of the Old World, rises, inaccessible to man, from a huge cup behind the outer mountain ramparts. The illusion is complete even from a short distance, especially when the bright sun glistens on the walls and spires.

Not far away is "The Devil's Tower" which although it is little known, is one of the most extraordinary spectacles of nature. It is shaped like the stump of a tree but it is six hundred feet high and has a diameter at the base of 1,700 feet.

Then there is the "Sphinx Rock," which might have been the pattern for the Sphinx of Egypt, and "The Needles," slender, perfectly formed, shafts of enormous height. As companion to the latter is the "Needle's

"The Needle's Eye" as Seen from the Highway

Eye." There are many others equally strange.

Tucked away in the southwest portion of South Dakota, almost in the exact center of the continent, the Black Hills region is said to have a wider range of nature's grandeur, more beauty and charm of scenery, more to offer the sportsman and pleasure seeker than any other area of equal size in the world.

Birds Not of Feather

Sir Oswald Mosley, the millionaire socialist, said at a dinner party in New York:

In Great Britain's far-flung empire many strange things happen. A Canadian's wife and a South African's wife once met in a London residential hotel.

"It's hard on us poor married women in South Africa," the latter lady said. "I live in with my husband on an ostrich farm, and it's nothing at all for him to be away two whole days at a time on an ostrich."

"Humph. What of that?" said the Canadian woman. "My husband is often away two whole weeks at a time on a lark."

One Way to Find Out

To return from a shopping trip to find her husband's coat hung over the back of a chair with a note pinned on it saying that he was returning home sick and if he felt unconscious to notify his wife to pay up the insurance was startling enough, but to go upstairs and find him stretched out on the bed was too much for a newly married wife.

She picked up a pin and vigorously prodded the reclining husband, who soon proved that at least he hadn't expired by exclaiming:

"Darn it. I'm not unconscious yet."

Church Musicians Protest

Church organists and singers of Paris have failed to induce the archbishopric of Paris to increase their wages and are now suggesting the possibility of a strike that would deprive the city's churches of the services of professional musicians.

The complaint has been made that while the cost of living has risen to a point five times as high as that of 1914, and the church has increased its charges for burials and marriages in that ratio, the pay of musicians has remained unchanged since the beginning of the war.

SOME NICE DRIVES

THERE are many fine drives within a day's distance of Vernadale. You who are fortunate enough to own and drive a car can enjoy them all at a small expense any Sunday. We are well located amongst many summer resorts all of which furnish accommodations to the motorists who may drive that way. We wonder how many of our towns people have enjoyed them all and know just how fine they are. You know it is we who live right here amid all these beautiful places who are most apt to miss the splendor of it all and be less appreciative than others from other states further away.

On the trip to Alexandria Sunday the many who made the drive from here must have noticed the fine arrangement of things, the dance pavilions, the summer hotels, tennis courts, golf links, bathing beaches and all else. From a distance of miles they stretch out along the highway No. 29 into the town of Alexandria. Here in the summer homes and hotels are found people from Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Pennsylvania and New York and all states far and wide in this country. They come hundreds of miles to spend a few months here in the delightful summer climate and enjoy the pleasures these lakes afford.

There is Bemidji to the north with Birchmont and all its fittings, golf links, bathing beaches, cottages for rent and every other form of amusement. Detroit on the west entertains hundreds of tourists each year and their equipment for doing it is elaborate. A trip to either Bemidji or Detroit is pleasant and instructive. One day will allow time enough for either town. Then there is Itasca State Park where at Douglas lodge accommodations are furnished, at a big enough price it is true, but a very fine day's outing trip.

Breezy Point near Pequot and Lum Park near Brainerd please many and they compete with Alexandria, Bemidji and Detroit in no mean style. For the motorist living here who does not like to venture quite so far in one day we have Leaf Lake, Twin lakes, Shamaineau, Alexandria lake, and several lesser resorts yet very pleasant and enjoyable. Try one next Sunday before winter sets in and spoils it all.—Vernadale Sun.

EXTENDING THE TOURIST SEASON

ONE of the great problems facing Brainerd and the attendant lake region is the extension of the tourist season. As early as 1922 THE BRAINERD DISPATCH made vigorous efforts to extend the season. Mention was secured in many of the largest newspapers of the Northwest, particularly fine editorials being written by the Minneapolis Tribune, the Minneapolis Journal, the Duluth Herald, etc., on the subject.

As chairman of the publicity committee of the Chamber of Commerce the writer put over a little campaign of advertising, receiving contributions for newspaper advertising from Breezy Point Lodge and other resorts and the slogan was, "See the Brainerd Lake Region in September and October." The situation of 1922 has not changed much over that of 1926.

September and October are still glorious months for motoring, for camping, for fishing and other outdoor sports. The need is just as urgent now as in years past to extend our season. The only way it can be done is by constant advertising and reiteration in every possible way.

The 10,000 Lakes of Minnesota Association favors extension of the season, but as matters stand, no resort is able to keep open continuously September and October unless it is assured the necessary patronage.

Early September marks the opening of school and parents return to their city homes to send their young hopefuls to the seats of learning, grade school, high school or university. But somewhere there must be a large population with children past the school age who can surely find time and opportunity to visit Minnesota after the rush of the June, July and August resort period.

THE CALL OF THE WILD

WILD animals are all around us in this grand lake region and may they live long and prosper. The other Sunday as we motored along the Cooley highway four miles beyond Hunt's filling station we noticed a big black animal with a bushy tail and a ridge of gray on its forehead amble to the center of the highway. We brought the car to a grinding stop and flagged the car behind us. "What's it, a bear?" queried the motorist to the rear of us. "Nope, a skunk, not a bear," said we. And both cars waited patiently until the skunk slowly retreated up the bank and through a barb-wire fence and on to his home in the brush.

The other night a real wolf invaded the tourist park in Wadena. Farmers on 13th street near Brainerd saw a fox playing with a rabbit along the roadside. Muskrats have been seen on roads traversing thick woodlands.

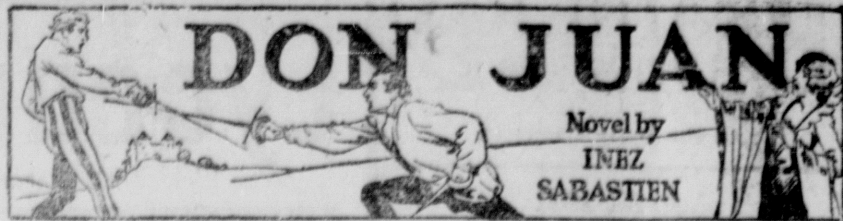

Eagles are seen at times and sea gulls are common. Loons squawk at night and owls hoot and other night life emits its cries. Long-legged sand cranes stand at attention on the lake shore as your car flits by. Geese and ducks are seen at intervals.

May all this day and night life be preserved in this wonderful setting of woods and lakes.

WHEN one reads the census reports on the death dealing properties of moonshine, the wonder is that any person is foolish enough to drink the poison. According to this authority the death rate from alcoholism has increased 300 per cent since 1920, and that the deaths from cirrhosis of the liver, one of the causes of booze, has advanced 20 per cent. The rainbow tinge is that the foolish are exterminating themselves, and if the rest of the population has any sense, America will soon be the most temperate nation on earth. Those who deliberately violate the laws of health and of the land get punished even if the prohibition officers do not catch them. They all come to the undertaker in much speedier time than they would if they cut out the illicit beverages, which not only intoxicate, but cook the liver, parboils the stomach and shock the heart.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

"Don Juan," screen play by Bess Meredith, starring John Barrymore, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

His father's warning—"Destroy women or they will destroy you!"—has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucetta Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. The Borgias contrive to have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith. Cynically he becomes the lover of Lucetta, while to avenge her father Adriana marries hateful Donati. On the wedding night Juan tries to forget Adriana by dallying with another woman.

She shrank back into a corner of the wide, cushioned seat. Her eyes filled with tears. Wearily Juan rose and walked away. He had changed greatly since his last meeting with Adriana, on the night when he found Donati hidden in her room. He was thinner, paler, and his mouth had a bitter twist. He waited slowly toward his bedroom, pausing near the door to give an order to Pedrillo. The servant picked up the lady's coat and took it to her. Juan turned, with a mirthless smile, as she rose to let Pedrillo slip the cloak around her shoulders.

Appealingly she held out her hand toward him. He shrugged his shoulders, went into his bedroom and closed the door behind him. Sobbing, she left the house. Juan paced the room restlessly. Bitterness had left his face, but he looked like a man haunted.

He tore her arms from his neck and hurled her from him.

He beat the palm of one hand with the clenched fist of the other; turned to glare at the nearest window, through which came the tolling of the bells, and turned again, to sink into a chair and then rise to pace the room again.

There was a noise at the door. He whirled to face it as a woman entered the room, and smiled grimly as he recognized the Marchesa Rinaldi.

She ran across the intervening space to him. Her voice trembled when she spoke.

"My husband suspects!" she cried. "I hurried here to warn you."

The grim smile did not leave Juan's face.

"Indeed?" he murmured, apparently only amused at her news.

Desperately she went on. "Help me, Juan!" she urged. "If I learn the truth it will end everything for me. Happiness—honor—my very life will be ruined. Help me!"

Juan was quite indifferent; rather bored, in fact. His own suffering was so great that that of anyone else could not touch him.

"You should have considered all this before," he told her, diffidently.

She cried out wildly, as if she had been given a mortal hurt. But before she could speak again there came the sound of clenched hands pounding on a door. Frantically she choked back her cries, turned to listen, turned back to Juan again.

"My husband!" she exclaimed.

Juan would have gone at once to open the door, but his progress was impeded because of her clinging to him. At last he released himself from her hands.

"Let us end this tiresome farce," he exclaimed, and she could not know that he meant not their deception of her husband, but his own life. The thought had come to him that possibly Rinaldi, finding her there, might try to kill him. What a relief if the effort was a success!

She sank to her knees, remained huddled there on the floor, as Juan went to the outer door, unbolted it and threw it open.

The Marchesa Rinaldi faced him. Jealousy and suspicion were in his eyes, as they met Juan's, then travelled on to where his wife crouched. He cried out like some animal suddenly gone mad, and rushed toward her, and Juan, calmly, closed and bolted the door.

"Then it is true!" Rinaldi cried, agonized. "It is true! You have loved him—and love him now!"

Trembling, she crouched still lower, burying her face in her hands. He turned to Juan, who had slowly followed him. Drawing his sword, he lunged at Juan, who stepped aside at the last possible moment, caught Rinaldi's hand, and twisted it until the sword fell clattering to the floor. Death would be sweet, but not in such a cause, he told himself.

Rinaldi was beside himself with rage. "The world will be better without you," he cried to Juan. "You destroyer of men's lives—of their faith in the women they love!"

Juan faced him contemptuously. "You fool! I deserve your stupid thanks for lifting the scales from your eyes," he replied. "No man is quite sane, who has illusions about women."

Over Rinaldi's shoulder he smiled mockingly at the Marchesa. Her face was drawn, piteous; he fought against the inclination to help her, to be kind and merciful, when she so much needed help. Life had tormented him—let it torture others also!

She stumbled to her feet, moaning, and ran to her husband. She threw her arms around his neck, uttering little imploring cries, clinging to him, sobbing. Rinaldi looked down at her almost tenderly; would have taken her in his arms, had not Juan's cynical laughter forced him to recall what he had for a moment forgotten.

Muttering a curse, he tore her arms from his neck and hurled her from him.

Juan wondered at himself. He had not meant to laugh, yet it was as if some force which he could not control was governing him; the hatred of life that had had its way with him since he lost faith in Adriana never for an instant lost its power.

He felt as if he were taking part in some scene that had no reality. He stood calmly watching the Marchesa, realizing her desperation all too well—it was akin to his own mood.

But he was not prepared for her next action. Drawing a short, jeweled dagger from the bodice of her gown, she drove it into her breast, straight toward the heart.

Juan stood, dazed. Rinaldi, with a cry that Juan felt would ring in his ears forever, ran to her, caught her falling body in his arms, and lowered it gently to the floor. Still holding her, he murmured endearments, kissed her hair, begged her to forgive him for his cruelty. And dying, she looked not at him, but at Juan.

Infuriated, Rinaldi laid her dead body on the stone floor and leaping to his feet, stood glaring at his wife's lover.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried, his voice thick with rage. His face was like that of a madman, twisted with fury. "You killed her, as surely as if your hand had struck the blow. You shall pay—"

Juan watched him coldly. Then with deliberation he sauntered to the door, unbolted it, and as he flung it wide, called to Pedrillo and the two men who sat drinking, awaiting Juan's return to the room.

Juan's voice was a lazy drawl; one would have said that he had no interest at all in what he was saying, had it not been for the way his eyes narrowed, and the tenseness of his body.

"A tragedy, gentlemen, in place of the usual comedy," he announced. "The husband, as it happens, has killed his wife!"

Rinaldi cried out in protest. Pedrillo and the two men ran to seize him; Juan stood watching coldly while he struggled, shouting accusations against Juan, declaring his own innocence.

SYNOPSIS

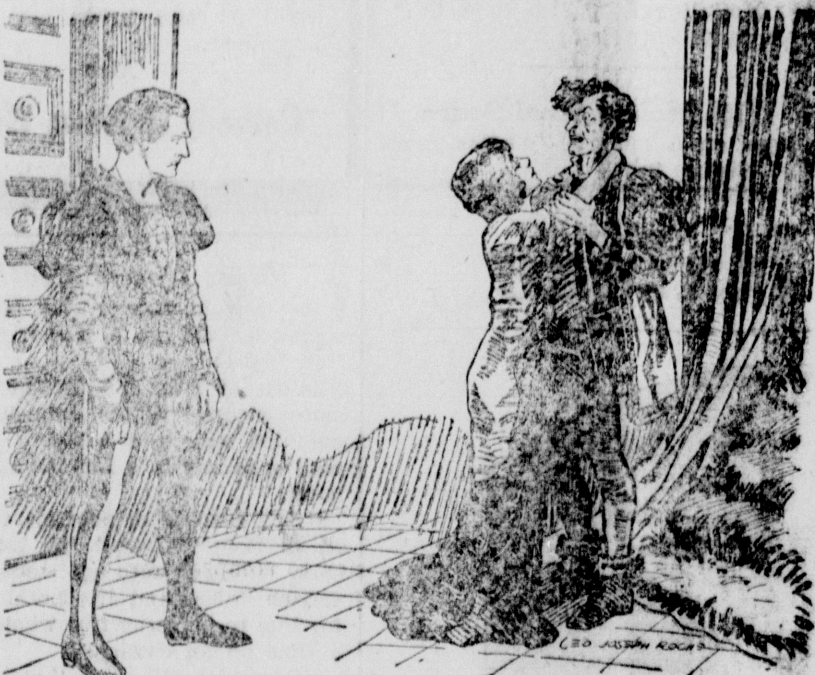

His father's warning—"Destroy women or they will destroy you!"—has made Juan the greatest lover of all time. His cynicism is checked by Madonna-like Adriana Varanese. Loving her, he reforms, but incurs the enmity of infamous Lucretia Borgia, who loves him, and Donati, her kinsman, who covets Adriana. The Borgias contrive to have Juan catch Donati in Adriana's room under circumstances that destroy his faith. Cynically he becomes the lover of Lucretia, while to save her father Adriana marries hateful Donati. On the wedding night Juan tries to forget Adriana by dallying with another woman.

She shrank back into a corner of the wide, cushioned seat. Her eyes filled with tears. Wearily Juan rose and walked away. He had changed greatly since his last meeting with Adriana, on the night when he found Donati hidden in her room. He was thinner, paler, and his mouth had a bitter twist. He walked slowly toward his bedroom, pausing near the door to give an order to Pedrillo. The servant picked up the lady's coat and took it to her. Juan turned, with a worthless smile, as she rose to let Pedrillo slip the cloak around her shoulders.

Apparently she held out her hand toward him. He shrugged his shoulders, went into his bedroom and closed the door behind him. Sobbing, she left the house.

Juan paced the room restlessly. One bitterness had left his face. He looked like a man haunted.

He tore her arms from his neck and hurled her from him.

He beat the palm of one hand with the clenched fist of the other; turned to glare at the nearest window, through which came the tolling of the bells, and turned again, to sink into a chair and then rise to pace the room again.

There was a noise at the door. He whirled to face it as a woman entered the room, and smiled grimly as he recognized the Marchesa Rinaldi.

She ran across the intervening space to him. Her voice trembled when she spoke.

"My husband suspects!" she cried. "I hurried here to warn you."

The grim smile did not leave Juan's face.

"Indeed?" he murmured, apparently only amused at her news.

Desperately she went on. "Help me, Juan!" she urged. "If you learn the truth it will end everything for me. Happiness—honor—my very life will be ruined. Help me!"

Juan was quite indifferent; rather bored, in fact. His own suffering was so great that that of anyone else could not touch him.

"You should have considered all this before," he told her, diffidently.

She cried out wildly, as if she had been given a mortal hurt. But before she could speak again there came the sound of clenched hands pounding on a door. Frantically she choked back her cries, turned to listen, turned back to Juan again.

"My husband!" she exclaimed. Juan would have gone at once to open the door, but his progress was impeded because of her clinging to him. At last he released himself from her hands.

"Let us end this tiresome farce," he exclaimed, and she could not know that he meant not their deception of her husband, but his own life. The thought had come to him that possibly Rinaldi, finding her there, might try to kill him. What a relief if the effort was a success!

She sank to her knees, remained huddled there on the floor, as Juan went to the outer door, unbolted it and threw it open.

The Marchesa Rinaldi faced him. Jealousy and suspicion were in his eyes, as they met Juan's, then travelled on to where his wife crouched. He cried out like some animal suddenly gone mad, and rushed toward her, and Juan, calmly, closed and bolted the door. "Then it is true!" Rinaldi cried, agonized. "It is true! You have loved him—and love him now!"

Trembling, she crouched still lower, burying her face in her hands. He turned to Juan, who had slowly followed him. Drawing his sword, he lunged at Juan, who stepped aside at the last possible moment, caught Rinaldi's hand, and twisted it until the sword fell clattering to the floor. Death would be sweet, but not in such a cause, he told himself.

Rinaldi was beside himself with rage.

"The world will be better without you," he cried to Juan. "You destroyer of men's lives—of their faith in the women they love!"

Juan faced him contemptuously. "You fool! I deserve your stupid thanks for lifting the scales from your eyes," he replied. "No man is quite sane, who has illusions about women."

Over Rinaldi's shoulder he smiled mockingly at the Marchese. Her face was drawn, piteous; he fought against the inclination to help her, to be kind and merciful, when she so much needed help. Life had tormented him—let it torture others also!

She stumbled to her feet, meaning, and ran to her husband. She threw her arms around his neck, uttering little imploring cries, clinging to him, sobbing. Rinaldi looked down at her almost tenderly; would have taken her in his arms, had not Juan's cynical laughter forced him to recall what he had for a moment forgotten.

Muttering a curse, he tore her arms from his neck and hurled her from him.

Juan wondered at himself. He had not meant to laugh, yet it was as if some force which he could not control was governing him; the hatred of life that had had its way with him since he lost faith in Adriana never for an instant lost its power.

He felt as if he were taking part in some scene that had no reality. He stood calmly watching the Marchese, realizing her desperation all too well—it was akin to his own mood.

But he was not prepared for her next action. Drawing a short, jewelled dagger from the bodice of her gown, she drove it into her breast, straight toward the heart.

Juan stood, dazed. Rinaldi, with a cry that Juan felt would ring in his ears forever, ran to her, caught her falling body in his arms, and lowered it gently to the floor. Still holding her, he murmured endearments, kissed her hair, begged her to forgive him for his cruelty. And dying, she looked not at him, but at Juan.

Infuriated, Rinaldi laid her dead body on the stone floor and leaping to his feet, stood glaring at his wife's lover.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried, his voice thick with rage. His face was like that of a madman, twisted with fury. "You killed her, as surely as if your hand had struck the blow. You shall pay—"

Juan watched him coldly. Then with deliberation he sauntered to the door, unbolted it, and as he swung it wide, called to Pedrillo and the two men who sat drinking, awaiting Juan's return to the room.

Juan's voice was a lazy drawl; one would have said that he had no interest at all in what he was saying, had it not been for the way his eyes narrowed, and the tenseness of his body.

"A tragedy, gentlemen, in place of the usual comedy," he announced. "The husband, as it happens, has killed his wife!"

Rinaldi cried out in protest. Pedrillo and the two men ran to seize him; Juan stood watching coldly while he struggled, shouting accusations against Juan, declaring his own innocence.

EVERY MAN A KING

The average American working man enjoys privileges every day, almost without cost, which kings and queens of a few centuries ago would have given their empires to possess.

The humblest man has more servants at his command than ever served a Roman emperor and none of them ever threaten mutiny or rebellion.

When Cleopatra, the famed queen of the Nile, rode in state or sat upon her throne she was encircled with a line of servants waving great fans to keep her highness cool and comfortable. Electric fans in American workshops, offices and kitchens do the work better than Egyptian servants ever did with no annoyance or revolt.

Caesar, desiring news, sent his couriers into the outmost corners of Rome, but a hundred thousand news-gatherers rush their word of the latest events along the wires from the most out of the way places of the earth while other thousands set it up in type and deliver it to the doorstep of the lowliest American every morning and night.

The ancient kinds employed their court jesters to thrill their jaded spirits, but the comic strips, the movies and the radio bring better amusement and more of it to the plain people every day.

The modern chemical laboratory, the phonograph, the player piano and the telephone perform feats of magic that no monarch of a hundred years ago could command.

Libraries were the exclusive property and playthings of royalty a few hundred years ago. Today every great municipality boasts of a library, free to the smallest child, with which no king's library would compare. The evening service will begin at 7:45 P. M. It will be an evangelistic service with a sermon entitled, "Breaking Through the Hedges." A prayer meeting service will be held prior to the evening service, and will begin at 7:30.

The regular weekly prayer meeting will be held on Thursday evening at 7:45 P. M. The closing chapters of the book of Daniel will be taken up for consideration. Very little is known about the prophetic portions of God's word, and we invite you to come, that you may grow in the knowledge of Christ.

Galli-Curci Swayed by the Seer of Sweden

Prima Donna Gives Wonderful Interpretation of the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg—

HENRY FORD'S Dearborn Independent publishes a remarkable article on Galli-Curci and Emanuel Swedenborg, by Clarence W. Barron of the Wall Street Journal, the world famous financial authority.

Mr. Barron declares that Galli-Curci has the most wonderful brain he has ever met or heard of in a woman, although she is much more "a true woman with a life and soul of affection for all that is ennobling and uplifting in the family, and in color, form, and music."

Mr. Barron is chairman of the Rotch Trustees, who acting under the will of Lydia S. Rotch of New Bedford, Mass., began in 1872 a modern translation of the Theological Works which Emanuel Swedenborg wrote and published in the Latin tongue, and deposited in the libraries of the world 150 years ago.

This work was completed and published by the Houghton Mifflin Co. in 32 volumes in 1907.

About three years ago there appeared in a Cleveland paper a paragraph that among her other accomplishments Galli-Curci had read all the Theological Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. The claim seemed so absurd to Mr. Barron that he thought it might be easily punctured by a simple inquiry as to the edition.

The Bible a Greater Work Than Ever
To Mr. Barron's direct inquiry Madame Galli-Curci promptly replied: "Yes, I have read in the past year the complete Swedenborg Works, in fact it is the Rotch Edition of the Houghton Mifflin Co. that I have."

"I can say certainly that the Bible to me is a greater work than it was before."

Mr. Barron says: "My astonishment was intensified. Familiar over many years with Swedenborg's general theological writings, I had set out to read the entire thirty-two volumes preparatory to an advertising campaign for the sale of this edition. Reading a few pages each day I finished my self-imposed task in fourteen years. I shall probably finish a second reading, at my present rate of progress, in perhaps ten years. Was it possible that a woman with no previous knowledge or relation to these books had read intelligently them within a year?"

Swedenborg's Writings
Mr. Barron continues: "As an economist writing state papers on weights, measures, coinages and currencies, Swedenborg is easily comprehended. As an engineer transporting ships overseas he is easily visualized. As a government official in the great mining industry of Sweden, writing practical books on mining and smelting, declared to be the foundation of modern metallurgy, he is of interest in the encyclopedia of scientific history. As the writer of volumes—original studies in search for the human soul—he is not without human interest."

"But when one comes to the realm of the unseen, where there is neither time nor space upon which to rest mental conceptions, few may enter into the fullness of the revelation which has come into the libraries of the world through Emanuel Swedenborg."

"Think of twenty modern-sized volumes, originally written in the Latin tongue and unfolding from the Hebrew of 'Genesis' and 'Exodus' the internal or spiritual sense that lies beneath the letter. Annex a dozen more similar volumes that not only expound every picture set forth in the book of 'Revelation' as conveyor of a tremendous truth of universal application throughout invisible degrees of creation and life, but also outline all the problems of sex as presented throughout the universe from the union of the love and wisdom in the divine down to sex crystallization in the mineral kingdom; include the deepest of all works ever written entitled, in the original Latin, 'Angelic Wisdom Concerning the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom.'

ish hosiery shades. The time is coming when women will devote less time to featuring their nether portions and they will turn from exposed boyishness to more modest

Then answer to yourself the number of years that ought to be required to master these thirty-two volumes."

Mean More Than Any Other Books
Mr. Barron, still credulous, continued his correspondence with Madame Galli-Curci for some months. He learned that soon after she lost her dear mother she had sought the Writings of Swedenborg in a desire to know more about the other world whence her mother had gone. She spent the entire summer vacation studying Swedenborg's Works, and declared: "They have meant, and mean more to me than anything else I have ever read."

When Galli-Curci returned from California Mr. Barron motored up into the Catskills to her beautiful Italian palace, and in an afternoon with her and her husband, Mr. Homer Samuels, he was convinced that Galli-Curci had read and devoured Swedenborg in a briefer period than anybody had ever done before.

He says of this interview: "Hours flew like minutes. I wasn't the questioner. Mr. and Mrs. Samuels were at me with the sharpest and deepest questions. They seemed in perfect harmony mentally and spiritually, as in their work in music."

Wanted to Learn
"She wanted to know about the 'Grand Man.' I told her it would be easier to comprehend it if she would forego the idea of time and space and consider, as Swedenborg says in 'The Apocalypse Explained,' that every society in the heavens connects with some organ of the human body and helps to sustain it. Therefore the heavens have the organization of the 'Grand Man,' but we need not think of it as a shape or figure."

"Yes," exclaimed her husband, "I see it; it is organization." I explained, also, how the 'Psalms' likewise connected with every society of the heavens, and how the world within and without was knit together in one grand poem and song of creation, man in the image of his Maker and knit into Him through the heavens, from which he has life in every organ of his body."

Swedenborg's 32 Volumes Read in a Single Summer
"Now I understand," she said, and asked me for explanation of other things. Her intelligent questions, as well as her statements, left no manner of doubt that Galli-Curci had performed the stupendous feat of reading the thirty-two volumes of Swedenborg in a single summer season. She declared 'Heaven and Hell' a very attractive and popular title and concerns that about which people are most eager to know; but it is not one of Swedenborg's great works; although it makes a good popular and introductory work."

A Help in Her Work
Galli-Curci understands the writings of Swedenborg even better than theologians, because she puts them into practice in the broadest life of loving helpfulness.

She said that Swedenborg had helped her in her work. She had no longer to think of herself but of her audiences, and let the music flow through her; regard herself just a medium for life to pour through. She felt with and for her audiences, and singing was no effort for her.

All Fear Vanishes
"The more you do—the more you give forth—the more life and energy is poured into you, and you are stronger and not weaker for the doing, the working and the singing. I always feel stronger; I am not exhausted at all by my singing. Swedenborg shows the reason and how life comes in as you pour it forth usefully to others. You don't have to try worry or fret. You know it is not you but that it is just being done through you."

Speaking further of the help Swedenborg had been to her in her work she said: "One gets so much more confidence. The other world and the one life, that comprehends all life, becomes reality and all fear and worry vanish."

Galli-Curci Swayed by the Seer of Sweden

Prima Donna Gives Wonderful Interpretation of the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg—

HENRY FORD'S Dearborn Independent publishes a remarkable article on Galli-Curci and Emanuel Swedenborg, by Clarence W. Barron of the Wall Street Journal, the world famous financial authority. Mr. Barron declares that Galli-Curci has the most wonderful brain he has ever met or heard of in a woman, although she is much more "a true woman with a life and soul of affection for all that is ennobling and uplifting in the family, and in color, form, and music."

Mr. Barron is chairman of the Rotch Trustees, who acting under the will of Lydia S. Rotch of New Bedford, Mass., began in 1872 a modern translation of the Theological Works which Emanuel Swedenborg wrote and published in the Latin tongue, and deposited in the libraries of the world 150 years ago.

This work was completed and published by the Houghton Mifflin Co. in 32 volumes in 1907.

About three years ago there appeared in a Cleveland paper a paragraph that among her other accomplishments Galli-Curci had read all the Theological Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. The claim seemed so absurd to Mr. Barron that he thought it might be easily punctured by a simple inquiry as to the edition.

The Bible a Greater Work Than Ever
To Mr. Barron's direct inquiry Madame Galli-Curci promptly replied: "Yes, I have read in the past year the complete Swedenborg Works, in fact it is the Rotch Edition of the Houghton Mifflin Co. that I have."

"I can say certainly that the Bible to me is a greater work than it was before."

Mr. Barron says: "My astonishment was intensified. Familiar over many years with Swedenborg's general theological writings, I had set out to read the entire thirty-two volumes preparatory to an advertising campaign for the sale of this edition. Reading a few pages each day I finished my self-imposed task in fourteen years. I shall probably finish a second reading, at my present rate of progress, in perhaps ten years. Was it possible that a woman with no previous knowledge or relation to these books had really intelligently read them within a year?"

Swedenborg's Writings

Mr. Barron continues: "As an economist writing state papers on weights, measures, coinages and currencies, Swedenborg is easily comprehended. As an engineer transporting ships overland he is easily visualized. As a government official in the great mining industry of Sweden, writing practical books on mining and smelting, declared to be the foundation of modern metallurgy, he is of interest in the encyclopedia of scientific history. As the writer of volumes—original studies in search for the human soul—he is not without human interest."

"But when one comes to the realm of the unseen, where there is neither time nor space upon which to rest mental conceptions, few may enter into the fullness of the revelation which has come into the libraries of the world through Emanuel Swedenborg."

"Think of twenty modern-sized volumes, originally written in the Latin tongue and unfolding from the Hebrew of 'Genesis' and 'Exodus' the internal or spiritual sense that lies beneath the letter. Annex a dozen more similar volumes that not only expound every picture set forth in the book of 'Revelation' as conveyor of a tremendous truth of universal application throughout invisible degrees of creation and life, but also define all the problems of sex as presented throughout the universe from the union of the love and wisdom in the divine down to sex crystallization in the mineral kingdom; include the deepest of all works ever written entitled, in the original Latin, 'Angelic Wisdom Concerning the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom.'"

Then answer to yourself the number of years that ought to be required to master these thirty-two volumes."

Mean More Than Any Other Books
Mr. Barron, still credulous, continued his correspondence with Madame Galli-Curci for some months. He learned that soon after she lost her dear mother she had sought the Writings of Swedenborg in a desire to know more about the other world whence her mother had gone. She spent the entire summer vacation studying Swedenborg's Works, and declared: "They have meant, and mean more to me than anything else I have ever read."

When Galli-Curci returned from California Mr. Barron motored up into the Catskills to her beautiful Italian palace, and in an afternoon with her and her husband, Mr. Homer Samuels, he was convinced that Galli-Curci had read and devoured Swedenborg in a briefer period than anybody had ever done before.

He says of this interview: "Hours flew like minutes. I wasn't the questioner. Mr. and Mrs. Samuels were at me with the sharpest and deepest questions. They seemed in perfect harmony mentally and spiritually, as in their work in music."

Wanted to Learn
"She wanted to know about the 'Grand Man'. I told her it would be easier to comprehend it if she would forego the idea of time and space and consider, as Swedenborg says in 'The Apocalypse Explained', that every society in the heavens connects with some organ of the human body and helps to sustain it. Therefore the heavens have the organization of the 'Grand Man', but we need not think of it as a shape or figure."

"Yes," exclaimed her husband, "I see it; it is organization." I explained, also, how the 'Psalms' likewise connected with every society of the heavens, and how the world within and without was knit together in one grand poem and song of creation, man in the image of his Maker and knit into Him through the heavens, from which he has life in every organ of his body."

Swedenborg's 32 Volumes Read in a Single Summer
"Now I understand," she said, and asked me for explanation of other things. Her intelligent questions, as well as her statements, left no manner of doubt that Galli-Curci had performed the stupendous feat of reading the thirty-two volumes of Swedenborg in a single summer season. She declared 'Heaven and Hell' a very attractive and popular title and concerns that about which people are most eager to know; but it is not one of Swedenborg's great works; although it makes a good popular and introductory work."

A Help in Her Work
Galli-Curci understands the writings of Swedenborg even better than theologians, because she puts them into practice in the broadest life of loving helpfulness.

She said that Swedenborg had helped her in her work. She had no longer to think of herself but of her audiences, and let the music flow through her; regard herself just a medium for life to pour through. She felt with and for her audiences, and singing was no effort for her.

All Fear Vanishes
"The more you do—the more you give forth—the more life and energy is poured into you, and you are stronger and not weaker for the doing, the working and the singing. I always feel stronger; I am not exhausted at all by my singing. Swedenborg shows the reason and how life comes in as you pour it forth usefully to others. You don't have to try worry or fret. You know it is not you but that it is just being done through you."

Speaking further of the help Swedenborg had been to her in her work she said: "One gets so much more confidence. The other world and the one life, that comprehends all life, becomes reality and all fear and worry vanish."

PINKIE MITCHELL SHADES FINLEY

DISCIPLINING STARS WITH THE IRON ROD

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
New York, Aug. 28.—If the Pittsburgh Pirates fail to win the National league pennant this season it probably will cost Bill McKechnie his job. The failure of the club may be blamed upon inner dissension but it is part of the duties of a successful manager to keep his own house in order and harmony. If McKechnie was responsible for discipline that was visited upon Max Carey, Babe Adams, Carson Bigbee and Eddie Moore, it certainly cannot be said of him that he feared to take drastic measures to restore order on the team.

Carey, captain of the team and a star for sixteen years, was suspended and waivers were asked on him. Adams and Bigbee were released unconditionally and Moore was sold to Boston.

Previously McKechnie had publicly censured and fined a number of other players, giving substantiation to reports heard several times last year and more frequently this year that everything wasn't well on the Pirate squad. McKechnie and Fred Clarke, vice president of the club, denied last year that cordial relations didn't exist among the players and between the players and the management, but it was significant that the team didn't play the real baseball in the world's series of which it was capable until John McGraw made some reflections on their courage.

While it was generally admitted that some of the players were not in sympathy with the double manager idea, it was somewhat of a shock when it was announced that Carey had been punished by the club as the leader of the insurrection.

Carey protested to Commissioner Landis and to John A. Heydler, president of the National league, that he was merely acting as the captain of the team and was speaking for players who believed that the best interests of the team were not being protected on the bench.

Carey said he had become reconciled to a transfer that would send him from a prospective championship club to one out of the money, but he pleaded to be cleared officially of the charge of being a rebel.

Landis and Heydler were understood to have told him that they couldn't interfere in the private affairs of a ball club and that unless the club wanted to withdraw the waivers that had been asked on him nothing could be done for him.

The action taken by the club owners in firing the four players and the discipline visited upon players by several other managers are significant. It obviously means that the club owners have decided upon the iron rod instead of kid gloves in maintaining discipline.

The moral effect will be far reaching on all other players because they will get the idea that no player's job is safe and that the old "down the river" treatment is still a penalty.

TRUDIE EDERLE IS BACK HOME WITH PARENTS

HAPPY GIRL, BUT A LITTLE DAZED BY GREAT RECEPTION GIVEN BY NEW YORK

GETS BIGGEST KICK WHEN POP GIVES HER BRIGHT, NEW, RED ROADSTER

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Aug. 28.—Back home with "Mom" and "Pop" and the kids, happy but still dazed by as great a reception as any city ever gave to a conquering hero, Gertrude Ederle couldn't tell today what was her happiest moment.

She wasn't quite sure whether it was when her feet first touched the sand on the English shore after she had swam the channel or when her "Mom" took her into her arms and fondled her like an infant.

She couldn't tell what gave her the biggest kick; the flattering words of Mayor James J. Walker, the riotous demonstration of more than a million New Yorkers or the cheers and the tears of the people in the block where "Pop" runs his butcher shop and where the large Ederle family lives.

But she tipped it off, quite unconsciously, when she asked of her huge, genial parent: "Pop, when do I hitch up the chariot?"

She's only 19 but since she grew out of curls and got a "bob," she has been begging her "Pop" for an automobile.

"I wouldn't have minded it so much to buy a big car for all the kids and my 'Mom,'" but Trudie wouldn't sit in anything but a roadster and she said it had to be red," Pop explained.

"I'm no tough Pop but I don't believe in rushing my kids too fast. No kids should have automobiles. They get in trouble when they get old, too," he continued. "I didn't tell Trudie that she could have a car when she got old enough, but I made up my mind last winter that she could have a car this year."

"When we were on the boat going to France I told her if she made the swim across the channel she could have her car, that it would be a roadster and that it would be red, and she said she was going to swim the channel for 'Mom' and for that car."

"She yelled out of the water several times to get my check book ready for the car and when she had made the swim about the first thing she said was—'Whoops, now for that roadster.'"

Trudie, according to the estimate of her counsel, Dudley Field Malone, has right in the clasp of her big, sun-burned hands, offers aggregating almost a million dollars. She probably will be able to accept at least half of them and at an age when less skilled girls are just finishing school she has a fortune in her lap.

But she acts bored when asked about her money and laughingly calls attention to—"I haven't got it yet."

"She isn't thinking about money now. She's got her car and she's got a lot of clothes she bought in Paris and what else counts to a girl?" Pop said.

SARAZEN, HAGEN, JOCK HUTCHINSON ARE FAVORITES

IN FINAL HOLES OF WESTERN OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

SARAZEN WITH 141 FOR FIRST 36 HOLES, TOPS THE FIELD

By BERT DEMBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28.—Genc Sarazen, still in the lead, with Walter Hagen and Jock Hutchinson not far behind, continued as favorites today, as the final 36 holes of the western open golf championship got under way. Sarazen whose 72 added to his 69 of the first day's play gave him 141 for the first 36 holes, topped the field.

P. O. Hart, Marietta, O., professional was next with 142 for his two day's play and it was his second day of running close to Sarazen, but close golf followers were stringing along with the better known "Hag" and "Hutch" as the chief menaces to Sarazen's lead.

Hagen shot a 68 yesterday to tie the course record and but for some bad luck on the 17th hole when his tee shot landed in an orchard he might have set up a new mark for the course. His 68 gave him 143, the same tally scored by Hutchinson, whose performance was brilliant.

There were others up in the running, who looked like dark horses in case any of the leaders broke. Laurie Ayton, Chicago, had 144. Harry Hampton of Memphis and Emmett French, Youngstown, Ohio, were up there with 146, as was Abe Espinosa, Chicago.

PENNSYLVANIA TO STRENGTHEN ITS BLUE LAWS

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The state of Pennsylvania today took steps to strengthen the blue laws of 1794 to prevent the playing of Sunday baseball.

Attorney General George W. Woodruff, in Dauphin county court, asked for a revocation of the charter of the Philadelphia club of the American league as a result of last Sunday's game between the Athletics and the Chicago White Sox.

The game was played after the Athletics management had obtained a temporary injunction restraining police from interfering with the game.

BELOIT MAN MAY GO TO BIG SHOW

Beloit, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—That "Butch" Krueger, fair hurler, will go up to the big show this winter is freely predicted here as a result of several new offers made the pitcher.

Otto Borchert, boss of the Milwaukee Brewers, has made the rookie hurler an enticing offer while Roger Bresnahan, acting manager of the New York Giants, in a letter written recently from Cincinnati, asks him to consider signing with the Giants. Columbus, of the A. A., has also put in a bid. The White Sox were first to make a bid for the youth.

Tilden and Chapin to Meet in Finals

Newport, R. I.—William T. Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., will meet today in the finals of the Newport tourney. Tilden beat Emanuel Alonzo of Spain yesterday, 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Chapin beat Brian I. C. Norton 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. In the doubles William M. Johnston recovered from his recent illness, will be paired with Dr. King against Phil Neer and James Davies.

Wallace Wins K. O. Over Farley

Cleveland, O.—Billy Wallace, lightweight, won a technical knockout over Tommy Farley of Philadelphia last night. Farley's seconds tossed in the sponge in the fourth round after Wallace had floored him three times. Wilbur Cochen, New York, colored featherweight beat Benny Gershe in every round of the 10-round semi-final.

CARRIES FIGHT IN ALL OF THE TEN ROUNDS

FINLEY KEPT HIMSELF IN A SHELL LIKE A TURTLE

REFUSED TO OPEN UP WHILE MITCHELL JABBED HIM

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Carrying the fight to his opponent through all of the 10 rounds, Pinkie Mitchell shaded Jimmy Finley, of Louisville, in 10 rounds here last night.

During the entire bout Finley kept himself in a shell and refused to "open up" while Mitchell scored repeatedly with left hand jabs and short right crosses. Results of four other bouts on the card were:

Jack Nichols, St. Paul, beat Joey Klein, Milwaukee, in six rounds.

Joe Azzerella, Milwaukee, stopped Danny Woods, Wausau, in third round.

Harry Soo Quong Bill, Des Moines, shaded Joey Weiss, Milwaukee, in six rounds.

Billy Besch, Milwaukee, outpointed Eddie Stack, Depere, in three rounds.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Eppa Rixey, pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, who yielded but three hits, beat the Brooklyn Robins, 4 to 0, and kept the Reds right behind Pittsburgh in the National league percentage column.

Joe Bush, Pittsburgh pitcher, applied a coat of whitewash to the New York Giants 4 to 0. He let the Giants down with four hits.

By dropping a game 7 to 9 to the Phillies, the St. Louis Cardinals dropped into third place.

The Chicago Cubs won their sixth straight when Tony Kaufmann pitched a 5 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves.

Tony Lazzeri's home run No. 16, which occurred with two on base, helped the Yankees beat Detroit 4 to 1. It also helped pitcher Pennock hang up his twentieth victory of the season.

Bib Falk's double in the ninth with three on the sacks gave the White Sox a 5 to 3 decision over the Washington Senators.

The St. Louis Browns beat the Athletics 7 to 1. It was the first game St. Louis had won on the Philadelphia lot this season.

Old Sherry Smith, Cleveland pitcher, knocked a home run in the 12th inning to win the second game of a doubleheader with the Boston Red Sox 5 to 4. The Indians had it easy in the first game 9 to 3.

Minneapolis cut Milwaukee's lead in the American association to 2½ games yesterday by defeating the Brewers 11 to 8, while the second place Colonels were remaining idle. The league leaders used three pitchers in an effort to stem the slugging Kels, but all their wiles were useless.

Messenger on the hill for Kansas City had little trouble defeating St. Paul 4 to 1, setting the Saints down with five scattered hits. Smith was the hitting star for the Blues with two safeties.

No other games were scheduled.

MARRIED MEN 18, SINGLE BOYS 4, M. E. KITTENBALL

The married men of the Methodist church accepted the challenge of the single men and defeated them at a game of kittenball last night to the tune of 18-4.

Every man on the married men's side worked like one great machine. For the married men, Anderson, Dillan, Peterson, Bernard, Senn, Bredenberg, Swanson, Fitzsimmons, and Werner starred. Werner pitched and had the single men at his mercy, with 11 strike outs. Only one ball was hit out of the field that being a fluke home run by Cunningham of the single men. In the fourth inning the married men scored 11 runs.

For the losers, Cunningham, pitcher; Fitzsimmons, catcher, and Nelson, first base, starred.

The married men are willing to accept the challenge of any other kittenball team in the city and they are asked to come in touch with Ben Anderson of the John M. Bye Clothing Co. or C. J. Werner of the J. C. Penney Co. All forthcoming challenges of the single men will also be accepted.

A. will play Backus on the last day of the fair, Wednesday.

Tickets for the series are being printed, and will be for sale starting tonight. Season tickets are being offered for fifty cents, while single admission tickets are twenty-five. By purchasing a season ticket, the holder will see at least two games, and will get the third game free if the teams divide the first two contests.

Interest in the series is increasing every day. Both teams are in the prime of condition, and ready to battle for the cup. The grounds are being rolled, the grass cut, the base lines chalked and everything else done to make the games attractive.

PINKIE MITCHELL SHADES FINLEY

DISCIPLINING STARS WITH THE IRON ROD

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
New York, Aug. 28.—If the Pittsburgh Pirates fail to win the National league pennant this season it probably will cost Bill McKechnie his job. The failure of the club may be blamed upon inner dissension but it is part of the duties of a successful manager to keep his own house in order and harmony.

If McKechnie was responsible for discipline that was visited upon Max Carey, Babe Adams, Carson Bigbee and Eddie Moore, it certainly cannot be said of him that he feared to take drastic measures to restore order on the team.

Carey, captain of the team and a star for sixteen years, was suspended and waivers were asked on him. Adams and Bigbee were released unconditionally and Moore was sold to Boston.

Previously McKechnie had publicly censured and fined a number of other players, giving substantiation to reports heard several times last year and more frequently this year that everything wasn't well on the Pirate squad.

McKechnie and Fred Clarke, vice president of the club, denied last year that cordial relations didn't exist among the players and between the players and the management, but it was significant that the team didn't play the real baseball in the world's series of which it was capable until John McGraw made some reflections on their courage.

While it was generally admitted that some of the players were not in sympathy with the double manager idea, it was somewhat of a shock when it was announced that Carey had been punished by the club as the leader of the insurrection.

Carey protested to Commissioner Landis and to John A. Heydler, president of the National league, that he was merely acting as the captain of the team and was speaking for players who believed that the best interests of the team were not being protected on the bench.

Carey said he had become reconciled to a transfer that would send him from a prospective championship club to one out of the money, but he pleaded to be cleared officially of the charge of being a rebel.

Landis and Heydler were understood to have told him that they couldn't interfere in the private affairs of a ball club and that unless the club wanted to withdraw the waivers that had been asked on him nothing could be done for him.

The action taken by the club owners in firing the four players and the discipline visited upon players by several other managers are significant. It obviously means that the club owners have decided upon the iron rod instead of kid gloves in maintaining discipline.

The moral effect will be far reaching on all other players because they will get the idea that no player's job is safe and that the old "down the river" treatment is still a penalty.

TRUDIE EDERLE IS BACK HOME WITH PARENTS

HAPPY GIRL, BUT A LITTLE DAZ-
ED BY GREAT RECEPTION
GIVEN BY NEW YORK

GETS BIGGEST KICK WHEN POP
GIVES HER BRIGHT, NEW,
RED ROADSTER

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Aug. 28.—Back home with "Mom" and "Pop" and the kids, happy but still dazed by as great a reception as any city ever gave to a conquering hero, Gertrude Ederle couldn't tell today what was her happiest moment.

She wasn't quite sure whether it was when her feet first touched the sand on the English shore after she had swam the channel or when her "Mom" took her into her arms and fondled her like an infant.

She couldn't tell what gave her the biggest kick; the flattering words of Mayor James J. Walker, the riotous demonstration of more than a million New Yorkers or the cheers and the tears of the people in the block where "Pop" runs his butcher shop and where the large Ederle family lives.

But she tipped it off, quite unconsciously, when she asked of her huge, genial parent:

"Pop, when do I hitch up the chariot?"

She's only 19 but since she grew out of curls and got a "bob," she has been begging her "Pop" for an automobile.

"I wouldn't have minded it so much to buy a big car for all the kids and my 'Mom,' but Trudie wouldn't sit in anything but a roadster and she said it had to be red," Pop explained.

"In no tough Pop but I don't believe in rushing my kids too fast. No kids should have automobiles. They get in trouble when they get old, too," he continued. "I didn't tell Trudie that she could have a car when she got old enough, but I made up my mind last winter that she could have a car this year."

"When we were on the boat going to France I told her if she made the swim across the channel she could have her car, that it would be a roadster and that it would be red, and she said she was going to swim the channel for 'Mom' and for that car."

"She yelled out of the water several times to get my check book ready for the car and when she had made the swim about the first thing she said was—'Whoops, now for that roadster.'"

Trudie, according to the estimate of her counsel, Dudley Field Malone, has right in the clasp of her big, sun-burned hands, offers aggregating almost a million dollars. She probably will be able to accept at least half of them and at an age when less skilled girls are just finishing school she has a fortune in her lap.

But she acts bored when asked about her money and laughingly calls attention to—"I haven't got it yet."

"She isn't thinking about money now. She's got her car and she's got a lot of clothes she bought in Paris and what else counts to a girl?" Pop said.

SARAZEN, HAGEN, JOCK HUTCHINSON ARE FAVORITES

IN FINAL HOLES OF WESTERN OPEN GOLF CHAM-PIONSHIP

SARAZEN WITH 141 FOR FIRST
36 HOLES, TOPS
THE FIELD

By BERT DEMBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28.—Gene Sarazen, still in the lead, with Walter Hagen and Jock Hutchinson not far behind, continued as favorites today, as the final 36 holes of the western open golf championship got under way. Sarazen whose 72 added to his 69 of the first day's play gave him 141 for the first 36 holes, topped the field.

P. O. Hart, Marietta, O., professional was next with 142 for his two day's play and it was his second day of running close to Sarazen, but close golf followers were stringing along with the better known "Hag" and "Hutch" as the chief menaces to Sarazen's lead.

Hagen shot a 68 yesterday to tie the course record and but for some bad luck on the 17th hole when his tee shot landed in an orchard he might have set up a new mark for the course. His 68 gave him 143, the same tally scored by Hutchinson, whose performance was brilliant.

There were others up in the running, who looked like dark horses in case any of the leaders broke. Laurie Ayton, Chicago, had 144. Harry Hampton of Memphis and Emmett French, Youngstown, Ohio, were up there with 146, as was Abe Espinosa, Chicago.

PENNSYLVANIA TO STRENGTHEN ITS BLUE LAWS

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—(UP)—The state of Pennsylvania today took steps to strengthen the blue laws of 1794 to prevent the playing of Sunday baseball.

Attorney General George W. Woodruff, in Dauphin county court, asked for a revocation of the charter of the Philadelphia club of the American league as a result of last Sunday's game between the Athletics and the Chicago White Sox.

The game was played after the Athletics management had obtained a temporary injunction restraining police from interfering with the game.

There will be no admission charged. A collection will be taken.

BELOIT MAN MAY GO TO BIG SHOW

Beloit, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—That "Butch" Krueger, fair hurler, will go up to the big show this winter is freely predicted here as a result of several new offers made the pitcher. Otto Borchert, boss of the Milwaukee Brewers, has made the rookie hurler an enticing offer while Roger Bresnahan, acting manager of the New York Giants, in a letter written recently from Cincinnati, asks him to consider signing with the Giants. Columbus, of the A. A., has also put in a bid. The White Sox were first to make a bid for the youth.

Tilden and Chapin to Meet in Finals

Newport, R. I.—William T. Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., will meet today in the finals of the Newport tourney. Tilden beat Emanuel Alonzo of Spain yesterday, 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Chapin beat Brian I. C. Norton 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. In the doubles William M. Johnston recovered from his recent illness, will be paired with Dr. King against Phil Neer and James Davies.

Wallace Wins K. O. Over Farley
Cleveland, O.—Billy Wallace, lightweight, won a technical knock-out over Tommy Farley of Philadelphia last night. Farley's seconds tossed in the sponge in the fourth round after Wallace had floored him three times. Wilbur Cochen, New York, colored featherweight beat Benny Gershe in every round of the 10-round semi-final.

REFUSED TO OPEN UP WHILE
MITCHELL JABBED
HIM

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 28.—(UP)—Carrying the fight to his opponent through all of the 10 rounds, Pinkie Mitchell shaded Jimmy Finley, of Louisville, in 10 rounds here last night.

During the entire bout Finley kept himself in a shell and refused to "open up" while Mitchell scored repeatedly with left hand jabs and short right crosses. Results of four other bouts on the card were:

Jack Nichols, St. Paul, beat Joey Klein, Milwaukee, in six rounds.

Joe Azzerella, Milwaukee, stopped Danny Woods, Wausau, in third round.

Harry Soo Quong Bill, Des Moines, shaded Joey Weiss, Milwaukee, in six rounds.

Billy Besch, Milwaukee, outpointed Eddie Stack, Depere, in three rounds.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Eppa Rixey, pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, who yielded but three hits, beat the Brooklyn Robins, 4 to 0, and kept the Reds right behind Pittsburgh in the National league percentage column.

Joe Bush, Pittsburgh pitcher, applied a coat of whitewash to the New York Giants 4 to 0. He let the Giants down with four hits.

By dropping a game 7 to 9 to the Phillies, the St. Louis Cardinals dropped into third place.

The Chicago Cubs won their sixth straight when Tony Kaufmann pitched a 5 to 1 victory over the Boston Braves.

Tony Lazzeri's home run No. 16, which occurred with two on base, helped the Yankees beat Detroit 4 to 1. It also helped pitcher Pennock hang up his twentieth victory of the season.

Bib Falk's double in the ninth with three on the sacks gave the White Sox a 5 to 3 decision over the Washington Senators.

The St. Louis Browns beat the Athletics 7 to 1. It was the first game St. Louis had won on the Philadelphia lot this season.

Old Sherry Smith, Cleveland pitcher, knocked a home run in the 12th inning to win the second game of a doubleheader with the Boston Red Sox 5 to 4. The Indians had it easy in the first game 9 to 3.

Minneapolis cut Milwaukee's lead in the American association to 2½ games yesterday by defeating the Brewers 11 to 8, while the second place Colonels were remaining idle. The league leaders used three pitchers in an effort to stem the slugging Kels, but all their wiles were useless.

Messenger on the hill for Kansas City had little trouble defeating St. Paul 4 to 1, setting the Saints down with five scattered hits. Smith was the hitting star for the Blues with two safeties.

No other games were scheduled.

MARRIED MEN 18, SINGLE BOYS 4, M. E. KITTENBALL

The married men of the Methodist church accepted the challenge of the single men and defeated them at a game of kittenball last night to the tune of 18-4.

Every man on the married men's side worked like one great machine. For the married men, Anderson, Dillan, Peterson, Bernard, Senn, Bredenberg, Swanson, Fitzsimmons, and Werner starred. Werner pitched and had the single men at his mercy, with 11 strike outs. Only one ball was hit out of the field that being a fluke home run by Cunningham of the single men. In the fourth inning the married men scored 11 runs.

For the losers, Cunningham, pitcher; Fitzsimmons, catcher, and Nelson, first base, starred.

The married men are willing to accept the challenge of any other kittenball team in the city and they are asked to come in touch with Ben Anderson of the John M. Bye Clothing Co. or C. J. Werner of the J. C. Penney Co. All forthcoming challenges of the single men will also be accepted.

"BRAINERD IS A SPARKLING GEM SET
AMONG NATURE'S PEARLS
BEAUTIES"

Editorial Note—International News Service is one of the three major news gathering organizations of the world. Its globe-girdling forces reach into all corners of the earth and the items gathered are transmitted over a network of telegraph wires, telephones and automatic telegraph printers such as is now in operation in the office of The Brainerd Dispatch. Great metropolitan daily papers gather news through the I. N. S. such as The New York Journal, with the largest evening circulation in America, The Chicago American, The Philadelphia Bulletin and The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of which E. C. Griffith, in years gone by city editor of The Brainerd Dispatch, is now managing editor.

By PAUL H. KARNES
Travelling Representative
International News Service

Three months vacation at a cost less than that necessary at almost any eastern resort is obtainable at the many resorts in the Brainerd district in the opinion of Paul H. Karnes, business representative of the International News Service, who is spending some time in this section.

"The beauties of Crow Wing and adjacent counties is unsurpassed in any section I have ever visited," Karnes said today. "The Atlantic shore, the Adirondacks, Canadian resorts, none of them offer anything more attractive to the tourist or pleasure-seeking vacationer than the territory of which Brainerd is the heart. The nature of my work requires constant travelling and I have had the good fortune to visit most of the beauty spots of America. Fishing, my hobby, has afforded me more pleasure here than elsewhere. Scores of giant fish fall victim to the hooks of anglers in this section. Eight and ten pounders excite little comment among the natives. But in many eastern waters I have seen an enthusiastic gathering gaze admiringly at a one or two pound catch. During my stay at a nearby resort I have not had an unfortunate day. In the Adirondacks I have fished for days with but little reward.

"For the tourist here there are excellent roads, unspoiled by rains and many of them smoother than main eastern highways. For those who admire scenic beauty there is nothing in any part of the country to surpass what we have right here.

"For the golfers there are several courses—those for the novice who dislikes the difficulty of surmounting traps and for the expert who enjoys the many hazards.

"A business trip several months ago brought me to Brainerd. A brief inspection tour brought me to the decision that my vacation should be spent here. And now as my sojourn draws to a close I regret that I must depart. I am told that fishing is just now coming to its best and I would like to be here to revel with the others when fishing is even better, if possible, than now. An angler's heaven is a truly fitting description of this section.

"Brainerd, itself, is a sparkling gem set among nature's peerless beauties. Its progressiveness is evident by a glance at the many new business structures and homes that the tourist may view as he lingers here. I predict an excellent future for Brainerd which lacks nothing to make the visitor's stay a happy one."

Uses of Iridium

The division of mineral technology of the bureau of mines says that pure iridium, as far as it knows, is not used on fountain pen tips. The exact percentage used is a trade secret with individual manufacturers; some may claim to use a very high percentage. However, it is mostly used in an alloy. It is employed in combination with platinum and palladium.

INQUIRIES FAIL TO IDENTIFY ONE JAMES A. GEARY

Duluth, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Inquiries among Duluth pioneer settlers and lumbermen today failed to identify James A. Geary, 73, who according to dispatches from Omaha won worldwide plaudits in 1878 when he saved 1,400 lives by piloting his Duluth, Mesaba and Northern railroad train through a raging forest fire from a lumber camp north of Duluth.

Walter Van Brunt, one of the oldest settlers at the head of the lakes, never heard of a forest fire in 1878. Hamilton M. Payton, pioneer lumberman, could not recall such a fire either.

It is believed here that the fire mentioned was the Hinckley fire of 1898, but Geary's name is not among the train crews of that time.

The Hinckley fire, however, was south of Duluth and not north as dispatches said.

Geary died at Omaha Friday.

Pleasant Miner.

Most people believe that "placer" mining went out of existence about the time that Robert W. Service began to live on his reputation as a poet, but many prospectors still are shuddering the yellow dust around Cariboo way.

Many of them are not making what could be termed a living wage when judged by city standards, but when the rent problem is no longer a problem and firewood is there for the taking, man requires but little in the wilderness to get by. His fare consists largely of bacon, beans, "punk," or homemade biscuits, pepper, salt and coffee, and $5 or $10 worth of this kind of fodder will last a long time.

There was great excitement in one little camp a few days ago, says a dispatch from Vancouver, B. C., when the Houser brothers uncovered a $24 nugget. Such findings are rare in the district, which was supposed to have been sluiced dry several years ago, but just such a strike as this is what keeps the gold-bitten mollers at their self-appointed task.

Placer mining is at once the most exciting and disheartening work under the sun. Harry Eden shoveled many tons of bowlders in May and the total production of his labors for one month was 95 cents. Such poor returns are rare, however, and it is the eternal hope which burns forever in the breasts of all miners which keeps them going back day after day, confident that the big strike is just ahead.

Since the diamond drills, rock crushers and smelters have come into vogue the whole complexion of gold mining has been changed. Up-to-the-minute miners refuse to be pestered with the antiquated methods and yearn for the slap and dash created by modern machinery.

To the old-timers, however, mining will never be mining without the pick and shovel and the sluice boxes. What matter if the sun parches their necks and their backs break with the unremitting toil of hoisting the gravel to the surface with a tiny hand windlass and then washing it in the boxes, the while they pick the tiny gold flakes from the riffles. Their regard is in finding the precious metal, no matter how small the quantity may be.

The sentiment of the miners of by-gone days can best be summed up in the words of Paddy Hodnutt, who has shoveled gravel for more than sixty of his eighty-five years.

"I wouldn't have anything to do with them things," he snorted, with a derogatory wave of his hand. "Such traps is not for the likes o' me, what has seen fortunes dug out of the ground with bare hands. When the time comes that I have to use such as that old Paddy'll give up minin' for good."

The Hennepin County Review published at Hopkins, Minn., in a recent issue carry a story on travel in the northwest by C. J. Schauffuss, in which Brainerd receives particular mention regarding its tourist park and location.

The article in part reads as follows: "After a day's rest at Bemidji, we made Brainerd our next stopping place. Brainerd has the best equipped tourist camp we have ever seen. Here the call of the ten thousand lakes come most forcefully to us, since Brainerd is regarded the gateway to the ten thousand lakes. From Brainerd we returned home with impressions of nature's beauties in our minds and hearts that shall never be forgotten."

ADMIRE SCENIC BEAUTY

"Brainerd is a Sparkling Gem Set
Among Nature's Peerless
Beauties"

Editorial Note—International News Service is one of the three major news gathering organizations of the world. Its globe-girdling forces reach into all corners of the earth and the items gathered are transmitted over a network of telegraph wires, telephones and automatic telegraph printers such as is now in operation in the office of The Brainerd Dispatch. Great metropolitan daily papers gather news through the I. N. S. such as The New York Journal, with the largest evening circulation in America, The Chicago American, The Philadelphia Bulletin and The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of which E. C. Griffith, in years gone by city editor of The Brainerd Dispatch, is now managing editor.

By PAUL H. KARNES
Travelling Representative
International News Service

Three months vacation at a cost less than that necessary at almost any eastern resort is obtainable at the many resorts in the Brainerd district in the opinion of Paul H. Karnes, business representative of the International News Service, who is spending some time in this section.

"The beauties of Crow Wing and adjacent counties is unsurpassed in any section I have ever visited," Karnes said today. "The Atlantic shore, the Adirondacks, Canadian resorts, none of them offer anything more attractive to the tourist or pleasure-seeking vacationer than the territory of which Brainerd is the heart. The nature of my work requires constant travelling and I have had the good fortune to visit most of the beauty spots of America. Fishing, my hobby, has afforded me more pleasure here than elsewhere. Scores of giant fish fall victim to the hooks of anglers in this section. Eight and ten pounders excite little comment among the natives. But in many eastern waters I have seen an enthusiastic gathering gaze admiringly at a one or two pound catch. During my stay at a nearby resort I have not had an unfortunate day. In the Adirondacks I have fished for days with but little reward.

"For the tourist here there are excellent roads, unspoiled by rains and many of them smoother than main eastern highways. For those who admire scenic beauty there is nothing in any part of the country to surpass what we have right here.

"For the golfer there are several courses—those for the novice who dislikes the difficulty of surmounting traps and for the expert who enjoys the many hazards.

"A business trip several months ago brought me to Brainerd. A brief inspection tour brought me to the decision that my vacation should be spent here. And now as my sojourn draws to a close I regret that I must depart. I am told that fishing is just now coming to its best and I would like to be here to revel with the others when fishing is even better, if possible, than now. An angler's heaven is a truly fitting description of this section.

"Brainerd, itself, is a sparkling gem set among nature's peerless beauties. Its progressiveness is evident by a glance at the many new business structures and homes that the tourist may view as he lingers here. I predict an excellent future for Brainerd which lacks nothing to make the visitor's stay a happy one."

Uses of Iridium

The division of mineral technology of the bureau of mines says that pure iridium, as far as it is known, is not used on fountain pen tips. The exact percentage used is a trade secret with individual manufacturers; some may claim to use a very high percentage. However, it is mostly used in an alloy. It is employed in combination with platinum and palladium.

INQUIRIES FAIL TO IDENTIFY ONE JAMES A. GEARY

Duluth, Aug. 28.—(UP)—Inquiries among Duluth pioneer settlers and lumbermen today failed to identify James A. Geary, 73, who according to dispatches from Omaha won worldwide plaudits in 1878 when he saved 1,400 lives by piloting his Duluth, Meeka and Northern railroad train through a raging forest fire from a lumber camp north of Duluth.

Walter Van Brunt, one of the oldest settlers at the head of the lakes, never heard of a forest fire in 1878. Hamilton M. Payton, pioneer lumberman, could not recall such a fire either.

It is believed here that the fire mentioned was the Hinckley fire of 1898, but Geary's name is not among the train crews of that time.

The Hinckley fire, however, was south of Duluth and not north as dispatches said.

Geary died at Omaha Friday.

Clifford Blom, of Ironton will be made an Eagle Scout at the Thursday evening camp fire of the "round up." He will be the third scout in the Crow Wing Area Council to receive this honor.

SEEKERS FOR GOLD NEVER LOSE HOPE

Fortune Ever Just Ahead of Placer Miner.

Most people believe that "placer" mining went out of existence about the time that Robert W. Service began to live on his reputation as a poet, but many prospectors still are sluicing the yellow dust around Cariboo way.

Many of them are not making what could be termed a living wage when judged by city standards, but when the rent problem is no longer a problem and firewood is there for the taking, man requires but little in the wilderness to get by. Placer mining is at once the most exciting and disheartening work under the sun. Harry Eden shoveled many tons of bowlders in May and the total production of his labors for one month was 55 cents. Such poor returns are rare, however, and it is the eternal hope which burns forever in the breasts of all miners which keeps them going back day after day, confident that the big strike is just ahead.

Since the diamond drills, rock crushers and smelters have come into vogue the whole complexion of gold mining has been changed. Up-to-the-minute miners refuse to be pestered with the antiquated methods and yearn for the slap and dash created by modern machinery.

The sentiment of the miners of bygone days can best be summed up in the words of Paddy Hodnutt, who has shoveled gravel for more than sixty of his eighty-five years.

QUEER SITUATION
BY TONGUE SLIP

Manager Must Use Pitcher
He Names to Umpire.

"If you were a big-league umpire, and a manager gave you the name of a pitcher to start the game who was about 2,000 miles away from the scene of action, what would you do?" asked Billy Evans, noted American league umpire, recently in a farming bee. "The rules state that when a manager gives the umpire the name of a pitcher to start the game, said pitcher must pitch until one batter either has been retired or reaches first base in safety. Then the manager can shift if he so desires.

"So that it won't be embarrassing, no names will be mentioned, other than to say that the game was played in the American league.

The home manager had a left-hander and right-hander warming up prior to the game. He was undecided as to whom he would start. On the club, up until three or four days prior to the game in question was a promising youngster who had seen considerable service in relief roles. He had been shipped to a club in the American association for more experience.

"In giving the name of the pitcher to the umpire, the home manager, undecided as to whether he would use a left-hander or right-hander, unthinkingly wrote in the name of the pitcher who had been shipped to the minors.

"Not until a few minutes before game time did the home-team manager discover his mistake. Hurdled by the visiting manager, possessing a sense of humor, and desiring to make things temporarily unpleasant, insisted that the rules be lived up to, that the man announced to pitch do so until at least one man was retired or reached first.

"The start of the game was delayed at least five minutes by what seemed a heated argument at the plate, which, however, was camouflage on the part of the visiting manager. Of course, it was merely a slip of the tongue, but it produced a queer situation."

Semi-Finals of Local Golf Tourney Tomorrow

Tomorrow the semi-finals of the Brainerd Country club golf tournament will be played at the club course commencing at 8:30 A. M. It was announced today by W. R. Hiller, chairman of the tournament committee.

At 1 P. M. local players will also play at Deerwood where Brainerd, Crosby and Deerwood will combine in an effort to defeat the "much touted" Hibbing team.

BULLS' ENTHUSIASM REVIVED

New York, Aug. 28. — (UP)—Bullish enthusiasm revived in the weekend session as a result of the accumulation of a high rate of mercantile and industrial prosperity throughout the country. Department of commerce reports brought testimony regarding the unparalleled volume of the business turnover up to the third week of August and besides that acceleration was distinctly noticeable at that time further strengthened indications pointing to an extremely prosperous autumn.

This outlook caused a revision of bearish estimates concerning stock prices and urgent short covering went ahead throughout the two hours trading.

In conjunction with fresh buying this demand carried Steel, General Motors and other speculative leaders to the best levels of the current movement. At the same time constructive activities went ahead in the rails under the leadership of Atchison which set up a new high record.

The market closed higher.

The Philadelphia of Our Ancestors

Here is shown a section of "High Street," a reproduction of Philadelphia's famous Market Street in the days of 1776. It is one of the outstanding features of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition now being held in Philadelphia to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Every building has been built to actual size and in actual architectural detail. The furnishings of each building are exact reproductions of those used in the Revolutionary days. Many of the pieces on display are the originals and today are worth thousands of dollars because of their historic value. The Exposition continues until December 1.

QUEER SITUATION
BY TONGUE SLIP

Manager Must Use Pitcher
He Names to Umpire.

"If you were a big-league umpire, and a manager gave you the name of a pitcher to start the game who was about 2,000 miles away from the scene of action, what would you do?" asked Billy Evans, noted American league umpire, recently in a farming bee. "The rules state that when a manager gives the umpire the name of a pitcher to start the game, said pitcher must pitch until one batter either has been retired or reaches first base in safety. Then the manager can shift if he so desires.

"So that it won't be embarrassing, no names will be mentioned, other than to say that the game was played in the American league.

The home manager had a left-hander and right-hander warming up prior to the game. He was undecided as to whom he would start. On the club, up until three or four days prior to the game in question was a promising youngster who had seen considerable service in relief roles. He had been shipped to a club in the American association for more experience.

"In giving the name of the pitcher to the umpire, the home manager, undecided as to whether he would use a left-hander or right-hander, unthinkingly wrote in the name of the pitcher who had been shipped to the minors.

"Not until a few minutes before game time did the home-team manager discover his mistake. Hurriedly he tried to adjust matters, but the visiting manager, possessing a sense of humor, and desiring to make things temporarily unpleasant, insisted that the rules be lived up to, that the man announced to pitch do so until at least one man was retired or reached first.

"The start of the game was delayed at least five minutes by what seemed a heated argument at the plate, which, however, was camouflage on the part of the visiting manager. Of course, it was merely a slip of the tongue, but it produced a queer situation."
